INTRODUCTION

This compilation was intended for the edification of my children and their progeny. It was not intended that it would ever become so comprehensive nor be so voluminous. As the research proceeded, it became apparent that there was a need to gather and record the material about the family before it became irretrievable. Like so many others who have had similar experience, I wish I had started collecting data earlier while older generations were still available to answer my many questions and contribute more precise information.

As I contacted others in search of information, many evinced an interest in the results and encouraged my effort to record the family history. I determined that if the family history was to be preserved for posterity I must make a greater effort to record it and make it available to families other than my own immediate family and others more remotely related. To that end, I have succeeded in gathering such a volume of information, about so many people, that I will have to resort to a very large volume rather than the small book which I had anticipated at the beginning. This book will be confined to the Boyds and Lockharts of Donegal, particularly those who lived in the area of Laccaduff, Drimitten, Kilcashel, Cloughboy, Crannogeboy, Longfield, Kin-noughty, Drimaha (Drumaghy), Shanaghan and other small townlands near Ardara, Donegal and on the Loughros Peninsula which juts out from Ardara between Loughros More and Loughros Beg bays as well as those who lived in various small towns of The Rosses.

As the work progressed, I discovered many complications. One of the most difficult problems was that of identifying individuals and being able to distinguish them from others with the same names. Restricted by the sea on one hand and the mountains on another and without transportation to take them to other fields there was much intermarrying among the families and a large proportion of the people living in the area bore the same surnames. To complicate things further, the Irish made a practice of naming first-born sons after paternal grandfathers and second-born sons after maternal grandfathers. Also, the Irish were prolific, apparently devoted little time to family planning, and it was not uncommon to find ten or more children in a family. With that many children with a propensity for naming their sons after grandfathers it was inevitable that the result would be not only a large number with the same surname but also a very large number with the same given names as well.

At first, I thought I could identify and distinguish individuals by assigning generation numbers but since so many brothers assigned the same names to their sons who would be of the same generation that was not the solution! The solution seemed to be in assigning identification numbers (IDs) to the individuals. To that end, it was necessary to devise a system. The system adopted consisted of a six digit identification number. The first digit of the ID number identified the group to which the individual belonged. There were 18 distinct groups of Boyds and Lockharts and each was assigned an alphabetical designation from "A" to "R". The second digit identified the generation of the individual. The remaining four digits were reserved for individual numbers within that particular alphabetical and generation group. With a total of 9999 numbers available in each group, provision was made for assigning new ID numbers for generations to come.

In some cases, because of the complex intermarriages, some people had more than one ID number and, in fact, some had as many as eight numbers because they were represented on that many family outlines. For instance, my great grandmother Susanna Boyd² was the progenitor in Group "A" and as second generation the first two digits of her ID number are A2 and since she was the first of her group assigned a number she was identified as A20001. My great grandfather Alexander Lockhart², as her spouse, also was included in Group "A" and was assigned ID number A20002. Conversely, Alexander Lockhart² was progenitor of Group "K" and assigned number K20001 while his spouse Susanna Boyd² was assigned number K20002. Since they were each assigned two ID numbers, on the alphabetical index they are listed as each having two ID numbers.

The assignment of generation numbers seemed a fairly simple task but, in reality, it was very complex. Irish men, for economic reasons, were unable to marry when young and quite often married women much younger than themselves. In some cases, the difference was as much as 25 or 30 years. Of course, that created a generation gap. Also, the eldest of a generation might marry the youngest of an older generation and that created a gap. These two types of generation gaps made the problem of assigning generation numbers to their children extremely difficult. At first, it seemed possible to assign the children the generation number which followed that of the mother but that didn't work either for at times the father was the younger generation. In most cases, children were assigned generation numbers which followed that of their parents. When a decision had to be made as to how to identify generations, where there was a difference in the generation number of parents, the choice generally was to assign numbers more compatible with those of their peers.

It was difficult to arrive at the format for this book. Since the book is about both the Boyd and Lockhart families, it seemed a good idea to devote a portion of a section to mutual background of the families in Scotland and then to write specifically about the origin of surnames, early history, eventual migration to Ireland, etc. prior to the time of migration to Ireland. I found the early history of the two families fascinating and hope that the reader will find it of special interest. Through early history of Scotland, it was established that the surname Buidhe (later Boyd) derived from a similar word in Gaelic which meant "fair" and the first to be identified by that name was William Buidhe or "William the Fair". That person was the forerunner of the many Boyd descendants and the noble family of Boyd is traced back to him. There is a question about the earliest use of Lockhart as a surname. One source states that in 1061 at a convocation at Forfar, Angus a group of surnames was adopted and one of those was Lockhart. However, the most popular version of the origin of the surname stems from an historical event which took place after 1329 subsequent to the death of Robert I (called The Bruce). The story is explained in the part of this book dealing with the early Lockhart history and won't be repeated here but that should be enough to indicate the sort of material contained in the section.

The history of both families is continued to their experience in Ireland and eventual migration to the United States where many were known to me personally. It is unfortunate that someone did not have the foresight to begin the family history during my early youth. At that time, really over a span of fifty years or more, the Boyds and Lockharts met annually for a family reunion at Schenley Park, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and at times there would be more than a hundred people in attendance.

Of the Lockharts who remained in Ireland, their descendants still own and operate ancestral farms - one at Drimmitten, Loughros Point and the other at Drumaghy (Drimaha) which is nearer Ardara. There are a great many Boyd families still living in the area and maintaining their homes on the farms of their ancestors.

Section VIII of this book contains biographical data pertaining to individuals. Section IX contains the family "tree" or outline of the groups who descend from the various "heads" of groups. The trees are identified alphabetically to correspond with the groups identified earlier. The ID numbers will not direct the reader to a particular place on a "tree" but the group and generation number listed in the ID index of individuals will help to locate someone. For example, if you check the index for a Hugh Boyd you may find the number H20001 which should direct the searcher to group "H" where he would look under the Hugh Boyds of that generation. In that way, the reader can readily see how that Hugh Boyd² fits into that family!

I should probably have explained the index earlier. It is arranged alphabetically and opposite the name the reader will find the ID numbers which are applicable to that person. As mentioned earlier, some people may have as many as eight or more ID numbers which means that they are part of at least that many of the 18 groups. This may seem unlikely but it certainly points up the tangled relationships of the family and helps to serve as an excuse for errors which I most likely have made!

Section VIII is presented to provide sketchy biographical data about individuals. It may seem difficult to follow but the data on individuals is arranged so that the data on a son or daughter follows the data for parents. However, the data for grandchildren intervenes before the data on siblings continues. I hope that a short study of the material will serve to help the reader understand the system. Originally, I had more detail to include in this portion such as the names of both paternal and maternal grandparents, etc. but the volume became too great and a decision was made to cut down the items to be included. I have provided the space for all categories of information even though I did not have the data to fill in but I imagine that many who read this may have access to the data and be able to fill in the information about their own families. They would be knowledgeable about dates of birth, death, marriage, place of interment, and so forth. In that connection, I hope that readers can forward data which I lack so that it can be collected in a central repository and eventually someone can re-write the family history or put out a supplement to it which will contain more complete information. Also, it is my hope that the data on new arrivals, new marriages, etc. will be forwarded so that the history can continue to grow.

There is a gap of several hundred years in the background of the family - roughly from the time of their arrival about 1600 to about 1800 which be about the approximate time of birth of those I have numbered generation one. Hopefully, the gap can be filled and that data also added to a subsequent book or supplement.

It is the hope of this writer that people will find as much pleasure in this book as he had in compiling it in spite of the many frustrations and it is certain that many of you readers will have further frustrations when you try to untangle the many Boyd and Lockhart families of Donegal!

CHAPTER I. BOYDS AND LOCKHARTS OF DONEGAL

I am a descendant of Alexander Lockhart² and Susanna Boyd². Both were born in the townland of Drimmitten (formerly Drumirrin) situated about six miles from Ardara, Donegal on Loughros peninsula. The peninsula is bounded on one side by Loughros More bay and on the other by Loughros Beg bay. The area toward the end of the peninsula is called "the point". There are many small townlands located on the peninsula and they were home to many of our ancestors. In addition, towns surrounding Ardara were also home to our ancestors as were others in the area called The Rosses. Some of the townlands were: Laccaduff, Drimmitten, Kilcashel, Cloughboy, Crannogeboy, Longfield, Kinnoughty, Drumaghy (Drimaha), Shanaghan, Gilbertstown, Glenties, Bruckless, Killybegs, Carrickfin, Dunmore, Dunkineely and others. I am sure that I have overlooked many.

Alexander Lockhart² was a son of an Alexander Lockhart¹ whose spouse is not known to me. Susanna Boyd² was a daughter of a Hugh Boyd¹ but I have yet to learn the name of that great great grandmother. Alexander Lockhart² and Susanna Boyd² were parents of ten children including my grandmother Annie Lockhart³ who married John Devitt³.

My intent had been to write a short summary of the descent of my immediate family for the benefit of my own children. It soon became apparent to me that the history of all of our Boyd and Lockhart antecedents should be recorded or the data might be lost forever. I had been told throughout the years that others were recording family history but when I tried to find the records there was only a smattering of data available. It seemed like a hopeless task when I delved into the unbelievably complicated relationships of the Boyds and Lockharts.

About ten years ago, I first became interested in the background of the family and concerned that the older people were leaving us and fewer and fewer were around to answer questions about the family. Then, in 1979, when I was preparing to visit Ireland, I began in earnest to try to get an understanding of who my Irish relatives were and determine what relatives were still in Ireland. I was dismayed at how little I was able to learn prior to my trip but counted heavily on the resources which I hoped to find at the Customs House, Dublin. On my arrival there, I learned that I was poorly equipped for the task. It seemed that in order to begin a search of my family it was imperative that I know the names of parishes, dioceses, baronies, poor law unions, and election districts - things of which I had absolutely no knowledge!

My trip to the Customs House provided very little help. It was there, however, that I learned for the first time that the lands which I believed owned by my ancestors were, in fact, rented from landlords. That shattered my hope of tracing ancestors through abstracts and deed transfers. I will go into that later in greater detail as I did learn a great deal of how land was handed down through the generations. While in Dublin, I also visited the National Library but found little help there. It seemed I would need much more basic information about our progenitors before I could expect to glean more from the public records.

With those disappointments behind me, I started out to find my relatives still living in Ireland. I had acquired names of people to visit, from others who had been to Ireland, but I had no idea of how the Boyds and Lockharts remaining there might have been related to my progenitors. However, I counted on them to give me the answers as to just who my forebears really were and something about their arrival in Ireland from Scotland. Also, I expected to find records of births, baptisms, marriages and deaths in church records and cemeteries. Unfortunately, I was not prepared for the tremendous number of persons who bore the same given and surnames and it seemed impossible to distinguish one Hugh Boyd from another of the same name!

My relatives who welcomed me into their homes were exceedingly helpful and friendly and I soon learned how closely we were actually related. In fact, I stayed in the ancestral home of the Lockharts which is known as "Bayview" and was the birthplace of my grandmother Annie Lockhart as well as that of several generations of grandfathers. It is said that the farm has been in the hands of Lockharts for almost 400 years. The relatives took me on the rounds to visit all of the families in the "point" area and it soon became apparent that I was related to all of them to varying degrees. As we went from cottage to cottage, I became hopelessly confused about the exact relationships and was at a loss to know which people we were talking about at a given time! Rather than finding answers to my questions, I found myself telling my hosts about the Boyds and Lockharts of my acquaintance and what I knew of my relatives.

One bit of information which came my way established the direction my research would take. I had been told the legend about three brothers and their mother who had migrated from Scotland. It is said the mother became exhausted and cried out "Far Enough!". One of the three sons elected to remain there with her at a place called Far Enough near Ramelton. The other two sons went on to their destination. I thought that one remained at a place called Drumaghy (Drimaha) and the other went on to Drumirrin (Drimmitten). On that basis, I labelled the Lockhart at Drimmitten (from whom I descend) as progenitor of Branch I; the one at Drumaghy as progenitor of Branch II; and the other at Far Enough as progenitor of Branch III. My research proceeded along those lines until I learned that the two brothers who continued their journey apparently stopped at Drumaghy and had adjoining farms there. Some time later, possibly several generations, a descendant of one of the brothers at Drumaghy sold his farm there and bought "Bayview Farm" at Drimmitten. I have not yet been able to trace the descent from the two brothers but have concluded that I cannot separate the Drimmitten and Drumaghy Lockharts into distinct branches. Although there definitely are Lockharts at the Ramelton area, I have not yet identified them as being part of our group although most likely they could definitely be of Branch III.

The Boyds also have a legend about the origin of their family in Ireland. In that case, the story tells of a father and three sons and a daughter who fled Scotland and migrated to Ireland. It is said that one of the three sons settled in The Rosses, one at Dunkineely and the third at Loughros Point. There are distinct groups of Boyds at each of the three places. Nothing is known of what became of the daughter. It is said that the father returned to Scotland and was executed. There may be some substance to the story especially when a study of the Boyds of Scotland reveals that others of the family had fallen into disrepute from time to time and some had been executed!

Whatever the circumstances of the arrival of the Boyds and Lockharts in Ireland, it has been established that they were associates and intermarried in Scotland and apparently migrated to Ireland and settled in the vicinity of Loughros Point at about the same time. The seat of the Boyd family in Scotland was Dean's Castle at Kilmarnock. Prior to the occupancy by the Boyd family, it is said that the castle had been occupied by Lockharts! In another section of the book, I have gone into great detail about the relationships and intermarriages of the Boyds and Lockharts over a period of several centuries.

Although the Boyds and Lockharts who I knew were almost exclusively Methodists, it seems that they had been Presbyterians when they arrived in Ireland. Actually, at one time they were Roman Catholic in Scotland. Oliver Baskin Lockhart of Drumaghy in writing a tract for a pamphlet celebrating the anniversary of the Methodist Church in Ardara said that Methodism came to that part of Ireland about 1788 when a young man named Matthew Stewart, with funds from John Wesley, went into the area and began preaching. However, one of the conditions required of the patent holders (or undertakers as they were called) was that they settle their area with Scot Presbyterian inland farmers. Some of the early meetings of the Methodists were held in what later became the home of my great grandfather John Devitt. In spite of the passing of time, the cottage is still called "Devitt's Cottage"! It had been owned by Robert Boyd (The Methodist) and early meetings of the church were held there. In 1858, Robert Boyd salvaged timbers from wreckage of the vessel and used them to erect the Wesley School on the farm of the Lockhart family at Drimitten. Oliver Lockhart also mentioned Master Hugh Lockhart³ who was a brother of my grandmother Annie Lockhart and taught school there for many, many years.

I had hoped to trace ownership of Bayview Farm through deeds and abstracts and learn the names of successive owners. In that way, I hoped to learn names of several generations of grandfathers, hopefully back to the Ulster Plantation in 1610. As of this writing, I have only traced ownership back to my great great grandfather Alexander Lockhart¹ and have not learned the name of his spouse.

The problem of land ownership is difficult for persons not familiar with the system to understand. In Griffith's Valuation of Tenements of 1857, all of the land presently occupied by Lockhart and Boyd families was listed as occupied and the land was listed as having been leased to one H. G. Murray-Stewart. The tract of land on which the Boyd and Lockhart properties is located is found on Ordnance Survey Map 73. In the work cited above, 97 acres of land is listed as being occupied by seven men including Alexander Lockhart and William Lockhart. It appears that each of the men had a plot for a house and office but collectively must have used the 97 acres. There was a column on the survey which showed "Rateable Valuation" and must have been used as the basis for tax assessment. The whole thing is an enigma to me as to my knowledge in 1857 Alexander Lockhart² (or possibly his widow Susanna Boyd Lockhart²) would have been owner of Bayview Farm and William Lockhart² (or his widow Mary McClintock²) would have been owners of what was known as Mary's Farm.

In The Ulster Scot, James Barkley Woodburn wrote: "The landlord fixed a fair rent and the tenant had a right to undisturbed possession of his farm so long as the rent was paid. He had thus an inducement to improve his farm, for the improvements were conceded to be his own, and in this way he increased the value of his holdings, which he could sell in the open market. He looked upon the sum of money he obtained as compensation for his improvements, and for handing over his holdings peaceably, and therefore he claimed to be a proprietor of the land together with the landlord. This custom probably originated at the time of the plantation of Ulster by James I, when the landlords got grants of land on condition that they settled the land with sturdy yeomen and their families. The 'undertakers' were glad to get tenants on any terms to make up the requisite number of men without which they would not have obtained their grants..."

In History of the Parish of Ardara, Patrick J. McGill wrote: "Many of our older 'boolies' became occupied townlands in the half century before 1800 (sic). The landlord having repossessed himself of these areas sold undivided portions of from 30 to 60 or 70 acres to new tenants. The writer was reared on one of these farms which his great grandfather purchased for £ 14." The term "boolies" is used for the places in the mountains where the animals were driven for summer grazing and the milkmaids lived on the mountains and tended the cattle and did spinning and weaving. Apparently Mr. McGill intended to say 1900, or it was a misprint, as the Land Division began in 1850.

Future study of Hearth Rolls and Tithe Applotment books may be a better source of identification of our ancestors than land records have been. At one time, all were required to pay a tithe to support the established church (Church of Ireland in this case) regardless of their personal religious preference and the Tithe Applotment Books was a record of those available for assessment of a tithe.

As indicated, the search for ancestors through the transfer of deeds to property brought little results. In most cases, land was handed down through primogeniture so that at best only the eldest of a family might be identified in that way. In many cases, property was left to daughters who took husbands and the farm then identified by the name of the husband. I have been told that, in some cases, changes of ownership went unnoticed when an effort was made to avoid paying assessments or fees in connection with the transfer.

Trying to find data pertaining to our early Boyds and Lockharts was complicated by the illiteracy of some of our people. The Penal Laws were directed at Roman Catholics but applied in many cases to protestants of other than the established church, or Church of Ireland, adherents. Many of my relatives were unable to write their names and signed by making their mark. People were unable to spell their own names nor those of their parents and what records that were kept did not contain accurate spellings. The result was that there were a variety of spellings of names. In the case of my great grandmother, I have her surname spelled Haslam, Haslan, Haslem, Haslein, etc. Those who did the records could only guess at spellings phonetically. In some cases, the records were lost by fire which destroyed them or by improper storage conditions which caused them to dry out or become mildewed. Many records were lost in the uprisings or "troubles" in Ireland's turbulent history. Other records were unavailable purely through lack of interest or inattention to detail. I found the death record of my great grandmother Ann Haslam in the Rectory of the Church of Ireland at Killybegs. She was listed only as Matron Devitt, died 1892, buried at Kilcashel Cemetery. No mention was made of her spouse, her first name, nor the day and month of her death.

On return from Ireland, I was more determined than ever that some visible record must be left of the many Boyds and Lockharts who were my ancestors. My experience tallies with those of fellow family researchers. We seem to become obsessed with the need to get all the data down on paper before our time runs out. Fortunately, one clue leads to another and eventually the pieces begin to fall together. I am grateful to those who have taken time to help me but resentful of those who could contribute but have not. My correspondence now extends as far as Australia and New Zealand as well as England and Ireland. I have yet to pick up a correspondent in Scotland.

Later, I have written in greater detail specifically about the Boyds in one case and also about the Lockharts separately. I feel quite sure that the reader will find duplication of material and for that I ask indulgence.

I wonder about the type of people our Boyds and Lockharts might have been when they first emigrated from Scotland. I feel that they must have been tenant farmers on large estates in Scotland who succumbed to the lure of a better life in another land. It has been established that a number of grants of land in Ulster were made to nobility of the Wigton area of Scotland - especially the patents for land in the area of Loughros Point. In The Scottish Background of the Migration, the author states: "Cunningham, Alexander of Powton, elder: Moynarga, 1,000 acres, Boylagh and Banagh barony, Donegal. From near Sorbie, Wigtonshire. Friend of Alexander Stewart of Garlies, whose brother, William, received land in the same precinct. 1609 applicant; George Murray of Broughton provided surety. Chosen as undertaker before 1610. Ulster patent dated 29 August 1610. Took possession in September....Entire barony ordered to be passed to Sir Robert Gordon of Lochinvar, December 1614. 22 October Sir Robert obtained Moynarga. By 15 October 1618 barony had passed to John Murray, a courtier who, after the death of the earl of Dunbar, managed many Scottish affairs for the king, and who in 1624 was made earl of Annandale. An Alexander Cunningham was agent for Murray."

It is a fact that they (the 'undertakers') were obligated to establish a given number of sturdy Scot Presbyterian farmers on their lands in a comparatively short time. It follows that they probably made a supreme effort among their Scottish tenants to have them join them in Ulster. We know that our Boyd and Lockhart families, had, at the time of Griffith's Valuations of Tenements in 1857, lived as occupants on land leased to H. G. Murray-Stewart. Whatever prompted the move to Ireland, the newcomers must have been appalled at the rocky, barren soil and poor vegetation of western Donegal. The miles and miles of stone fences (ditches) attest to the back-breaking effort which must have been needed to eke out an existence.

A little more insight into the type of people drawn to participate in the plantation of Ulster may be gained from The Ulster Scot, by James Berkley Woodburn who relates the view of a man named Stewart of Dunaghadee who paints his view of the new emigrants: "In 1610, the land was taken possession of, and settlers began to arrive in large numbers. Stewart of Dunaghadee has given us an account of these first settlers. He says, 'King James ... having given some lands to some men who he had nobiletated, these men sought tenants for their lands; and from Scotland came many, and from England not a few, yet all of them generally the scum of both nations, who for debt, or breaking and fleeing from justice, or seeking shelter, came hither hoping to be without fear of man's justice in a land where there was nothing, or but little as yet, of the fear of God. And, in a few years there flocked such a multitude of people from Scotland that these northern counties of Down, Antrim, Londonderry, etc. were in good measure planted which has been waste before.' Stewart further says: 'Going for Ireland was looked on as a miserable mark of a deplorable person - yea, it was turned to a proverb, and one of the worst expressions of disdain that could be invented (sic) to tell a man that Ireland would be his "hinder end".' This sobering bit of information should give the reader pause for reflection when recalling the illustrious Boyds and Lockharts who had been members of the royalty and nobility of Scotland.

It was understandable that, after the illfated adventures of the Boyds during the reign of James III when their lands and titles were forfeited, that the Boyds would turn up some two hundred years later as tenant farm emigrants to Ulster. However, the Boyd family did continue as part of the nobility through the tenure of the 4th Earl of Kilmarnock but he, too, was forfeited for having joined the Jacobites, He was taken prisoner at the Battle of Drummossie Moor, Culloden and later found guilty of treason and executed. That was not the end of the Boyd nobility either as one of his sons had the estates restored to him and the Boyds continued among the nobility and the Stewart reign lasted through Ann, Queen of England toward the end of the 18th Century.

CHAPTER II. HOW DID THEY COME? WHO WERE THEY?

In the book, Scotland the Nation, the author poses the question: "Who were the Scots and Angles?" and answers his own query: "They were neither indigenous to the soil. The Scots were immigrants and came (between A.D. 498 and A.D. 503), a small body of about five hundred with their chief Fergus Mor and settled where now is Argyll, giving it the name of the part of Ireland whence they came - Dalriada. They were in fact 'land grabbers'. Ireland had been Christianized by St. Patrick and these Scots were Christians. In the same way that there was no recognized geographical boundary between England and Scotland, so was there no division between Ireland and the west of Scotland, save a narrow sea. A less obstacle to a seafaring folk than land would be. The division between England and Scotland, then as now, was one of race and character; but between Ireland and Scotland there was not even that division for both were Celts. It is a confusing fact that Ireland was then, and for about a century later, called Scotland and her people Scots. The little body of emigrants, therefore, brought their name with them and became the Scots of Dalriada; and when, in the course of time, it happened that a Scots king succeeded to the Pictish throne, Scotland became the name of the whole country."

The original house of the Boyds in Scotland is said to have been the Monastery of Paisley, 1157, and is supposed to have been in the possession of Walter fitz Alan, ancestor of the royal Stewarts. In 1591, the main branch of the Boyd family was seated at Dean Castle, Kilmarnock. Much has been said throughout this book about the close association of the Boyd and Lockhart families through generations. On page 5 of a pamphlet about Dean Castle, published by Kilmarnock and Loudoun District Council Cultural Services Department, c. 1976, in reference to the site of the castle, it is stated: "...This seems to have been the chief house of the estate of Kilmarnock throughout the Middle Ages. There is no documentary evidence prior to a charter of 1316 by which Robert I granted the lands of Kilmarnock to his follower, Robert Boyd. There is reason to think that the estate had already existed for very many years. According to Pont it had earlier been owned by the de Soules and before that by the Lockharts or Loccards, who are known to have held the estates of Symington and Stevenson from the late 12th Century. It is possible that the estate of Kilmarnock dates back to the same period." All Boyds seem to have "roots" in Ayrshire and it is believed that our Boyds migrated from there and that the Lockharts migrated from Lanarkshire.

Prior to the time we find the Boyds in Scotland, they were believed to have been in Brittany. Ms. Dolla Caldwell in writing about one Thomas Boyd identifies a man named Feance as an early ancestor of the Boyds and Stewarts. According to Ms. Caldwell's version, the Boyds lived in Brittany and embraced a religious sect known as Waldenses. The Waldenses were protestants and were persecuted because of their religious preference. They are said to have fled to the Piedmont Valley, Italy and that some of the Waldenses still remain in the Alps of France and Italy but most became Calvinist Presbyterians. The time of their arrival in Scotland seems to be somewhere in the 12th Century. In the appendix, I have included a copy of the outline of the Boyd and Stewart line of descent. The reader can peruse the outline at leisure but, briefly, the family is said to have descended from Thome, a descendant of King Kenneth II whose son was Feance. Feance was succeeded by a son Alan who died in 1153. This outline identifies Alan as the first Lord High Steward but another source identifies a Walter fitz Alan as having been the first Lord High Steward who is said to have been granted the title by David I as an honorary title which was later made hereditary by King Malcolm IV. Whether Walter or Alan was the first Lord High Steward or not, it seems that Walter the 6th Lord High Steward adopted Stewart as a surname. Walter 6th married Princess Marjory Bruce and they became parents of Robert II who followed his uncle David to the throne of Scotland and began the Stewart (Stuart) dynasty.

Another son of Alan was Simon. Simon became father of a son Robert who was of fair complexion and was called 'Robert the Fair'. The Gaelic word for fair is described variously as: boide, boidle, buidhe and probably other spellings. Robert the Fair became known as Robert Buidhe and finally as Robert Boyd. The noble family of Boyd is said to have originated with him. Also, most all people who bear the surname Boyd are said to have descended from him. There are other sources which give different versions of the progenitors such as the identification of the family head as Faald rather than Feance! However, generally, the descent follows the same pattern.

In the foregoing, the relationship of the royal family of Stewart and the noble family of Boyd has been pointed out. In separate sections dealing with Boyd and Lockhart families respectively, much is written to show that both families were well known to each other and there are examples where their names appear together on charters, etc. as early as the early 12th Century. Also, there is ample evidence that the Boyds were related to the Stewarts and that the Lockharts associated with the Boyds and Stewarts. Sir Simon Loccard was a companion of King Robert I (Bruce) before and after his ascension to the throne and the noble family of Boyd held prominent place among the succession of Stewart kings beginning with Robert II and were especially prominent in the reign of James III of Scotland.

Although Robert, Lord Boyd, was forfeited during the reign of James III, other Boyds continued in favor and the Earls of Kilmarnock survived until Robert 4th joined forces with Bonnie Prince Charles and fought with the Jacobites at the Battle of Drummoissie Moor, Culloden. Of course, they suffered a rout when they confronted the overwhelming forces of the Hanoverians under command of the Duke of Cumberland. Robert Boyd, 4th Earl of Kilmarnock was taken prisoner and later found guilty of treason and was executed. His estate was also forfeited but was later restored to one of his sons. His son James had fought on the opposite side with the Hanoverians. Of course, by that time, our 'poor relatives' had already migrated to Ulster!

The status of the Boyds and Lockharts from whom we descend is questionable. If they had ever been part of the nobility of Scotland they apparently arrived in Ulster as tenant farmers. It seems almost certain that for a long period they must have been tenant farmers in Scotland before the migration as part of the 150,000 Scots Presbyterians who planted Ulster.

The following is taken from Studies in Irish History 1603-1649 and is found on p. 34: "The Scottish emigrants ... looked upon Ulster as a veritable Eldorado. A ferry was established between Donaghadee and the Rynnes of Galloway and Portpatrick. Over it there poured such a ragged regiment as the Irish Sea had never witnessed before or since. Not singly, they came, but in battalions. The Scotch Bishop of Raphoe (Montgomery, Bishop of Clogher, Derry, and Raphoe; grand uncle of Montgomery of the Manuscripts) received permission at one grant for the denization of three hundred of his countrymen whom he should bring over. They had candidates for denization among all classes; younger brothers and sons-in-law and cousins to get grants of land and workmen and farmers ready to settle down on industrial pursuits." On p. 36 of the same book, we find: "Eighty thousand small Scotch adventurers came in between 1690 and 1698 into different parts of Ireland but chiefly into Ulster."

In that connection, although I have already presented it elsewhere, since it seems appropriate now, I would like to repeat the following which is found on p. 38 of Chapter VI of The Ulster Scot: "In 1610 the land was taken possession of, and settlers began to arrive in large numbers ... King James ... having given some lands to some men whom he had nobilitated, these men sought tenants for their lands; and from Scotland came many and from England not a few, yet all of them generally the scum of both nations, who, for debt, or breaking and fleeing from justice, or seeking shelter, came hither, hoping to be without fear of man's justice in a land where there was nothing, or but little as yet, of the fear of God. Some historians try to explain away these statements, but we know that the first to emigrate to a new country or to a mining camp are generally those who have not succeeded at home, or who having been in debt, or who are dissatisfied with their present condition."

Apparently the first few years after the settlers arrived the abundant harvests produced by the land which had lain fallow for a long period attracted other settlers and many of these were men of property. We can console ourselves with the thought that "our" ancestors were among the men of property! However, they can not be seriously considered as it is doubtful that the lands of northwest Donegal would have produced the abundant crops which would attract the men of property.

It is said that Donegal was not planted except in the eastern portion where a strong colony took root in the district of Raphoe, which was afterwards included in the Presbytery of Laggan. This is of special interest to the writer as the Boyds and Lockharts from whom we descend are from the rather desolate northwest Donegal coastal area. Also, another source had said that people who had been dispossessed were banished to the "wastes of Raphoe and Doe Castle!"

CHAPTER III. THE ULSTER PLANTATION

The novel Trinity by Leon Uris gives a tremendous insight into conditions which existed in Ireland both before and after the plantation of Ulster. Although it is fiction, it gives 'outsiders' a better understanding of what the continuing 'troubles' are all about and helps with our ability to understand the positions of both disputant groups. In a succeeding book, Ireland A Terrible Beauty, authors Leon and Jil Uris have presented a comprehensive study of the Irish problems and the whole is made vivid and real by the many, many photographs which make up the book. The writer has sought, and received, permission from the author to excerpt material from the above books. The material presented here provides a far better description of conditions which preceded and followed the plantation.

When Henry VIII came to the throne he was able to turn his attention to Ireland. "He tried to win over the Irish lords of all descents and traditions by what he called 'sober ways', politic drifts and amiable persuasions." It is said that he would have succeeded but for two obstacles:

1. He claimed the right of a feudal monarch to dispose of the land of Ireland to those friendly to him while ancient Irish law denied his right to this.
2. Henry's break with Rome. Prior to this, English kings claimed the lordship of Ireland through the pope's feudal grant but Henry sacrificed even that dubious legality. He proclaimed himself king of Ireland by right of conquest and set out to make good his claim by smashing down all opposition, driving 'rebel' landlords from their estates, and granting these to his own followers, whether Irish or English. This policy continued with his daughters Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth.

The Reformation made good progress in England under Queen Elizabeth and all effective opposition to it was snuffed out. In Ireland, things were vastly different, for both Irish and Anglo-Irish remained steadfast in religious allegiance to Rome. During the long reign of Queen Elizabeth, her opponents in Ireland were fighting for religious as well as political liberty, which in the atmosphere of the time, added new dimensions of bitterness and savagery to the struggle. Because there was still no unity of purpose or action among the great lords of Ireland, they were defeated piecemeal.

Elizabeth's death in 1603 coincided almost exactly in time with the extinguishing of the last vestiges of Irish independence; the conquest was complete, and the Irish with their land desolated by war and racked by famines, their lords banished or reduced to the status of petty squires, their trade and commerce destroyed and their religion forbidden, were left to the mercy of the conquerors.

A few years later, the surviving princes and lords of Ulster, who had been restored to their own estates by treaty, became fearful for their lives and secretly fled the country. This gave the government the excuse to seize vast tracts of land in Ulster, to eject the remaining landholders and to replace them with English and Scottish settlers, all stout Protestants and all loyal to the crown. This was the beginning of the 'Ulster Question' which has bedeviled Irish affairs ever since.

Queen Mary first conjured up the notion of plantations. She was the Catholic daughter of Henry VIII. She reigned between Henry VIII and Queen Elizabeth. Plantations were attempted in other counties such as Offaly and Leix where the land of the O'Mores and O'Connors were confiscated and they were sent packing to be replaced by an importation of English farmers. The plantation did not take hold. Later, a plantation in Munster, headed by Sir Walter Raleigh collapsed.

Ulster was the plantation that came to stay. This area was ruled by the O'Neill Clan which paid titular homage to the crown. Of all the rebellious elements, the O'Neills remained more constant forcing Elizabeth's generals into a succession of battles. After the defeat at Kinsale in 1602 and the 'Flight of the Earls' in 1607 the bite was put on to neutralize the O'Neills and their allies forever.

James I, Elizabeth's successor, moved to plant Ulster. A hundred and fifty thousand Scots were imported to accomplish the feat. O'Neill lands were dissected and snatched up at four pence an acre, a few hundred pounds bought a borough, a thousand pounds bought a barony and the title to go with it. Derry was granted to the guilds of London, and fortress towns were erected against the avenging wrath of the savage natives. Preacher men were also planted, but the language barrier and no love for Britain left them no more successful than the conversion attempts during the Reformation.

As stated earlier, the O'Mores were sent packing and their lands were confiscated during the attempt at the Plantation of Offaly and Leix. Further, the chief of Boylagh, Turlogh O'Boyle was obliged to trek from his ancestral home at Kiltoorish with his followers and tenants, and accept an estate of 2,000 inhospitable acres in the barren wastes of Doe. I find this especially interesting because the Moores and Hanlons (my mother's people) lived in the shadow of Doe Castle for several centuries and I wonder if they might have been the followers and tenants of Turlogh O'Boyle?

The first great upheaval came as a result of the flight of O'Donnell, O'Neill, and other chieftans in 1607. Because they had escaped without the knowledge or permission of Chichester, the English Lord Deputy, and had taken refuge among friends on the Continent supposed to be hostile to England, they were denounced as traitors and their lands were confiscated and made available for plantation purposes.

The Plantation Commissioners, from their 'camp near Lyffer' published in August 1610 a list of the divisions of land (designated Precincts or Proportions) in County Donegal, showing which were to be granted to British Undertakers, what to Servitors, and what to natives, and giving warning to natives to remove themselves immediately from the lands assigned to Undertakers. But, as the new owners were not ready to take over, a second warning was issued staying the natives until May 1611, but demanding that they pay rent to their new masters for the period.

Before getting title to the land, each Undertaker had to renounce the Spiritual Supremacy of the Pope. He was bound within two years to plant a competent number of English or inland Scottish tenants upon his lands, and not to demise his estate, or any part thereof, to the 'mere Irish'. He was to establish a strong court 'bawne' for his own residence, and to encourage his tenants to build houses for themselves and their families nearby, for their mutual defense. Toward this end, he was to have ready at all times a convenient store of arms, and a number of trained men who should be 'viewed or mustered every half-year, according to the manner of England'.

The disposal of the dispossessed natives presented a big problem. They could not be placed on lands likely to be covered by the planters. They had to be scattered about in such a way as to prevent their getting together and forming conspiracies, and perhaps taking a bloody revenge. They were eventually located in small companies, under the ever watchful eyes of servitors on tracts of land where there was ample room for improvement. The chief of Boylagh, Turlogh O'Boyle, was settled in the same area where Ineen Dub h O'Donnell, mother of Red Hugh, Donagh McSwayne of Banagh, and many others of high estate among the Gael.

The Proportion of Moynargan (Monargan), the Proportion of Mullaveigh, and the greater part of the Proportion of Boylagh Lochtarach were to come within the confines of the Parish of Ardara. The Proportion of Monargan included all the area from the Bridge of Ardara to the eastern boundary of Carrickatleave, southward by Meenavalley School, Roughra, and Leamagowra, to the border of Glencolumbkille, and northwards to Machera and the peninsula of Loughros (or the area where the Boyds and Lockharts settled). This was designated a thousand acre estate but only arable land was taken into account. On the 29th of August 1610, it was granted to Alexander Cunningham, a Protestant Scot from Wigtonshire, at an annual rent of £ 5-6-8. The premises were created the Manor of Monargan with 300 acres of demesne (manorial land actually possessed by the lord and not held by tenants), and a court baron for the administration of justice.

In 1615, Alexander Cunningham sold it to Sir Robert Gordon who appears to have lost it by his neglect to perform the conditions of the Patent. By 15 October 1618 the barony had passed to John Murray, a courtier who, after the death of the earl of Dunbar, managed many Scottish affairs for the king, and who in 1624 was made earl of Annandale.

Pynner's Survey of 1618-19 found that a strong bawne of lime and stone had been built in the proportion of Monargan. It had a few British tenants but a great many Irish dwelt upon the lands. In 1622, it belonged to Sir Thomas Chichester and a wooden house had been erected inside the 'bawne'. There were but two British men. The 'bawne' was a strongly built enclosure of lime and stone inside of which the Undertaker had his homestead. The rectangular ruins (130 feet by 80 feet) on the lands of Donal Gallagher, Stonebrook, are believed to be the remains of the Monargan 'bawne'.

The proportion of Mullaveigh extended from Dawros Head to the Owentacker River, across to Gortnacort and Coraness, and on towards Glenties. It was also described as a 1,000 acre estate. It did not include the sea strip from Lackagh through Narin to Maas which belonged to Boylagh Iochtarach. This proportion was granted to one James McCulloch who was another Scot from Wigtonshire. In 1612, McCulloch sold the land to Patrick Nemock who was a Burgess of Edinburgh. Nemock in turn sold the property to Sir Robert Gordon. Gordon lost this estate just as he had lost Monargan. At the time of Pynner's Survey, this estate was inhabited by mostly Irish and there was neither 'bawne' nor castle on the premises.

Boylagh Iochtarach was comprised of the area from Lacagh through Portnoo and Narin and included part of Loughfad, Castle-goland, Ballyeriston, and continued to the Glen of Glenties and Fintown. George Murray, Laird of Broughton was granted this estate of 1500 acres at an annual rent of £ 8. He also acquired the fishing rights on the creeks and bays of Gweebarra and Lough-barra. George Murray died at Lifford in 1613 and all his lands reverted to the crown. Pynner's Survey (1618-1619) reported no buildings and all the land was inhabited with Irish. The only change in 1622 was that there was one British family.

Each proportion was to be regarded as a parish of the Church of Ireland and large areas, called Glebe lands, were set apart for the use of the clergy which was in addition to his stipend.
In the Civil Survey of 1654-56 "the half-quarter of Monargan and Cornecard (Gortnacart) were mentioned as Glebe land. This quarter of land, half of which belonged to Mullaveigh, "was bounded on the north by the Owenea River, on the east with a quarter of land called Derries and on the south with a quarter of land called Kill Terne, and on the west with the half-quarter of Doghell." Mr. Robert Lindsay was the proprietor of this estate and was identified as 'incumbent'.

As indicated earlier, the Boyds and Lockharts had been associated with the Annandales in Scotland circa the 12th and 13th Centuries. The Annandales again came to attention when John Murray was made earl of Annandale while 'undertaker' of Monargan.
The Annandales again came to attention in the following account of part of the area as stated in Hill's Plantation of Ulster,
p. 500: "The hard work required to build homes and till the fields of Donegal had little appeal for the type of settler who came over.
Many of them turned what they could into money and went straight back. Besides the Undertakers greatly preferred the natives as tenants, not only because the Irish freely paid higher rents, but also because they could much more easily 'rule and order' them than they could the canny Scot. But, this was contrary to the terms of their contract. Pynner's Survey (1618-19) revealed the true situation and all eight portions comprised in the Baronies of Boylagh and Banagh were declared forfeit to the crown. In 1620, the whole area was assigned to John Murray of Cookpool, Scotland who was a great friend of King James I. In 1624, he was created Earl of Annandale and the following year was appointed to the government of Donegal "with powers to suppress and punish by fire and sword malefactors, traitors, rebels, and all who refused to submit to the law."

My interest in reading this material is heightened by an earlier association of the Boyds and Lockharts with the Annandales. Several hundred years earlier in Scotland, the Boyds and Lockharts had been associated with Robert Bruce (the Competitor) who was an earlier Lord Annandale. It seems possible that the association continued and that the Boyds and Lockharts might have been tenants of the Annandales in Scotland and been recruited to take part in the Plantation of Ulster.

In 1626, John Murray leased the lands to a papist and the estates again became forfeit to the crown. The Earl got a re-grant from Charles I in 1629 but was obliged to pay double the former rent together with a fine of £ 300. Letters Patent were also granted for the establishing of the fairs at both Dunkineely and Magheramore. According to the terms of the contract, the estate was one of 10,000 but actually it was over 330,000 acres.

New arrangements were now made for settling of the native Irish. One fourth of the whole area was earmarked for this purpose. Any more than that would render the grant void.

According to Hill's Plantation of Ulster, the following areas were allotted to the native Irish in the area of Ardara: "... the quarter of Ballylough, the half-quarter of Machery-revy (Machera), the half-quarter of Cloghboy, the half-quarter of Liskeraghan, the three ballybose of Abbermillane, Drumcha, and Kilspervan, the quarter of Kiltery, the half-quarter of Ardara, and the half-quarter of Corincarde (Gortnacort), the quarter of Damrus, the half-quarter of Mullaveagh, and the sessi-aghs of Macherunane and Carrickboyh, the quarters of Sumugh and Dromevyn, the sessiaghs of Ballymackillduffe, the sessiaghs of Derryness, the half-quarter of Cashelgowlan, the quarter of Bally-iristowne, the quarter of Dromboghill ..."

D. Verschoyle, in writing about the area, stated: "From the point of view of the promoters, the Plantation of Ulster had not been a success in Boylagh and Banagh. The reason may lie in the fact that the first Undertakers all came from a district in Wigtonshire known as the Machairs which was a relatively fertile spot as compared with other parts of Scotland and certainly more so than the greater part of southwest Donegal." Repeatedly, we come across indications that the Undertakers were most all Protestant Scots from the area of Wigtonshire and that supports the assumption that the Boyds and Lockharts might have been recruited from the estates of the same Undertakers estates in Scotland.

In the second half of the 17th Century there was a prolonged legal battle over the Boylagh-Banagh Estate. Eventually, the case was decided in favor of Richard Murray, a collateral descendant of the Annandales. To pay court costs, he alienated much of his estate in the years 1665-1690.

Though the historical part of this work treats mainly with the Boyd and Lockhart ancestors, the Moores and Hanlons who were my mother's progenitors are equally of interest to many who will read this book. For that reason, I want to include additional data from Patrick J. McGill's History of the Parish of Ardara:

"Under the scheme of the Plantation of Ulster, Turlogh Rua lost his Kiltoorish estate and was given 2,000 acres in the Barony of Kilmacrennan where he had for neighbors the outstanding figures of the Tirchonail nobility, including Ineen Dubh, the mother of Red Hugh O'Donnell. This new property was between Creeslough and Dunfanaghy."

This area has been the home of the Moores and Hanlons for hundreds of years and since the O'Mores from Offaly and Leix were also assigned to this area at one time it is quite possible that our Moore relatives might have descended from those same O'Mores.

The foregoing has been presented as an idea of how the land was portioned out and it seems that our ancestors could not have owned land for a long time after their migration to Ireland and probably did not actually achieve ownership until the Land Division about 1850. Ownership of the land has always been a puzzle to me. An uncle had always said, "As long as grass is green and water runs down hill, the Moore farm will belong to the Moores!" Well, the Moore farm now belongs to the Breslands! I have since learned that the present owner bought the property for what had been owed on it. I came across a similar circumstance when I learned that the cottage of my great grandfather was apparently sold to pay his debts prior to his death.

Under the Brehan Code which was the law of the Irish under which the clans functioned, no one owned land. Ownership of all the land rested with the clans and each was allotted portions of land for his family's use. Actually, clansmen had to consult with the rest of the clan before disposing of his herds and flocks. That apparently was the status of ownership of the lands at the time of the Reformation and the time Henry VIII established himself as a feudal monarch over Ireland. It was then that he chased the clan chiefs and kings from the land holdings and doled these parcels out to his supporters as patronage or sold the lands to select people for nominal fees. Even the latter is questionable as it seems the lands were let on a rental basis but could be seized by the crown for some failure to fulfill an obligation. Henry VIII's daughters - Mary and Elizabeth - continued his practices and finally James I moved to plant Ulster. Prior to the plantation of Ulster, an attempt had been made to start plantations at Leix and Offaly and at Munster. Under the system, "traitors were sent packing and their lands confiscated!" The Undertakers who eventually were granted patents required their tenants to pay rent and as leaseholders apparently the Undertakers had to pay rent to the crown. However, it seems that the tenants acquired property rights in the improvements made, i.e. fences built, houses and buildings erected, and in other ways acquired rights in the properties which were marketable and could be sold. About 2.5% of the population were leaseholders who held most of the land in perpetuity. They were mainly members of the Church of Ireland. Generally, they did not engage in tillage but to a great extent operated large grazing farms. Middlemen, usually one or two, made their living by renting larger tracts of land and then sub-letting them as smaller tracts on short term leases or annual tenancies. Cotters lived in poor cottages, usually on someone else's property. They had very little land of their own and usually rented a patch of conacre (that is, land let annually on an eleven month tenure to the highest bidder) to grow a crop of potatoes or to pasture their flocks. Agricultural laborers were at the very bottom of the pyramid. They had no land at all but often they too rented a patch of conacre. In a normal season, the potato crop from one acre was enough to maintain a man, his wife, and six children for three quarters of the year albeit in a shocking state of personal squalor. Of course, the potato was the mainstay of the diet and sometimes the only diet. In the book, History and Social Influence of the Potato, author Radcliffe N. Solaman wrote:

"The monotony of the potato diet was depressing enough but the ease of its preparation ... could scarcely fail to reduce the art of living to its lowest functional value. The fact that the potato demanded no other help to its ingestion than some salt, nor to its service but bare fingers, was not inducive of refinement, personal or otherwise. What pride could be taken in the home, or what call was there for ceremony, however elementary, to welcome a meal that was about to be shared with the pigs and poultry, and from the same cauldron?"

The periods of famine occasioned by the failure of the potato crops because of blight were compounded in misery by the periodic epidemics. Many tales have been recounted about hardships endured by the people during the famines but the area of northwest Donegal fared better than other sections. As mentioned earlier, the people lived in small townlands and villages with poor sanitary facilities. Later, with the land division and "squaring of the land" people were able to move out to more spacious houses with less congestion and sanitary conditions improved and the epidemics of cholera and typhoid became less frequent.

The native Irish were never reconciled to the loss of their lands and there were continued uprisings throughout the years. In 1641, one such uprising cost the lives of thousands of the Scots Presbyterians and that was later avenged in full measure under Cromwell by a far broader set of murders and confiscation of what was left of any decent land.

In 1685 James II, the last Catholic monarch of England, ascended the throne and renewed hope in Ireland that the plantation would be abolished. Fearing a renewal of Catholic ascendancy to the throne, James II's opposition came up with William of Orange, a Dutchman, who landed in England in 1688 with the overwhelming support of the establishment. (Incidentally, it has been suggested that the Devitts are descended from a Dutchman named Cornelius DeWitt - pronounced De Vitt - who settled in the vicinity of Newry!)

James II fled, first going to France to seek support, and then to Ireland to set up his forces. Although he promised religious toleration and no confiscation of lands held by Presbyterians, his presence reminded them well of the massacres of 1641 and they (Presbyterians) fled into the fortified cities.

Eventually a confrontation took place at the Battle of the Boyne and William of Orange - King Billy - defeated James II on 1 July 1690. Shortly thereafter a treaty was signed at Limerick securing the Protestant stranglehold. James' army was allowed to enter France. Some fifteen thousand of Ireland's best fighting men went into exile which is known as the "Flight of the Wild Geese".

The bitter fruits of defeat were the Penal Laws aimed at the destruction of the Irish Catholics as a human breed. Edmund Burke noted that "the Penal code was a machine of as wise and elaborate contrivance for the impoverishment and degradation of the people, and the debasement of them, of human nature itself, as ever proceeded from the perverted ingenuity of man."

As non-Anglicans, Scottish Presbyterians were also deemed inferior and were to come under some aspects of the penal code. However, there existed the "Ulster Tradition" of protecting certain basic rights of Presbyterian farmers that spared them from the full fate of the Catholics. Nonetheless, the heavy hand of the Ascendancy and gentry weighed tellingly and brought on an emigration of some two hundred thousand Scots to America during the eighteenth century.

My Scot-Irish ancestors were not among those who emigrated in the eighteenth century but remained to endure the troubles, famines and poverty and their exodus probably did not begin until about the middle of the nineteenth century. Aside from the shortage of food during the famines, there never was enough work to occupy the men of the large families and they sought fortunes elsewhere - some went to Canada and the United States, others to Australia and New Zealand.

The early 1850s witnessed a far-reaching change in the whole area south and west of Ardara. This section was known as the Murray-Stewart Estate. Land division which had started in 1849 was now in full swing. The run-dale system where people lived in villages in the valleys in the winter and took their herds to graze on the mountains in spring and summer was being replaced by consolidated holdings. Tracts of land which started in the valley and stretched up the mountain to the ridge replaced the old "boolies". The old villages which nestled in the valleys for centuries were now abandoned and the occupants spread out to the new holdings and transferred their belongings to isolated homesteads. The change was not welcome. With tears in their eyes, the families crossed the intervening fields and left behind the sentimental associations of their little villages, and the sense of security they felt with their friends, relatives and families.

Land division was a boon to the landlord as well as the tenants. Compact farms enhanced the rent value and made evictions more effective. Under the old system the patches of land were widely scattered and only the tenants knew where the various patches lay. To the tenant there were a great many benefits. The consolidated holdings tended to improve his husbandry and his spacious, well-lighted house was a vast improvement over the miserable hovel in which he had lived in the overcrowded village. As pointed out earlier, the breaking up of these unsanitary clusters went a long way toward ending the fever epidemics.

Many of the whitewashed cottages that dotted the countryside until recent times were erected at the time of the "squaring" of the land. Of those that remain, most of the original thatched roofs have been replaced with corrugated steel. In many cases the tenants constructed the house of their own design and out of personal resources. Those who were prepared to build according to the landlord's plan were provided with doors, windows and other materials to a value of £ 6. However, this was not a gift and the sum had to be repaid by an addition to the rent. Because of the rectangular shape, these were called "square houses". These houses were more spacious and had larger rooms, larger doors and windows. The low doorways particularly came to my attention as I always had to stoop to enter. These structures carried a higher rateable valuation and that decided many in favor of the less pretentious structures. The "square houses" have been replaced in many cases by the modern bungalow and with them has gone some of the picturesque beauty of Ireland.

The foregoing has been set down to give the reader some idea of how things were in Donegal during the early times when our ancestors came to live there. Of course, during the time of the land division and the "squaring of the land" many of our ancestors had already left or were preparing to leave their troubles behind and seek their fortunes in the lands of glowing opportunities. My great grandfather was one of those who left for America in the middle of the 19th Century. I have always had difficulty in understanding how, in view of the poverty, the emigrants could ever get the money together for their passage. Now that I understand the conditions under which they travelled I can more readily understand the comparatively little cost as compared to the luxury of travel today. In many cases the emigrants paid for their actual transport only and provided hampers of food for themselves and families for the duration of the voyage and in many cases furnished their own bedding and slept on the decks. Also, in some cases during the famines and epidemics emigration was subsidized by the government. The following interesting item appeared in the Dublin Evening Post of 25 July 1816. It was excerpted from a letter written to his wife by an emigrant Irish glassblower in Boston, Massachusetts on 14 May 1816: "The hardest matter to be obtained here is Bank of England or Bank of Ireland notes and, therefore, I find it more difficult to send you £ 24 to pay for your passage and the three children".

Probably, by far, most emigrants reached their destination through help of others who preceded them and worked hard and dilligently to earn the money to send home to bring yet another of their family to what surely to them must have seemed like a land of milk and honey.

CHAPTER IV. THE ANCIENT FAMILY OF BOYD

The first information concerning the ancient family of Boyd was found in a book which I came across in the Missouri State Historical Society. A book on the family history of one Thomas Boyd had been written by a Ms. Dolla Caldwell. Ms. Caldwell wrote of the origin of the surname Boyd and of the surname Stewart. It was from this source also that I first learned of the relationship between the Boyds and Stewarts and of the latter's entry into the line of succession in Scotland and eventually to the throne of England. The tenure of the Stewarts (Stuarts) extended from Robert II in Scotland to Queen Ann of England who reigned in 1748. Of course that was the first knowledge I had of our relationship to the noble family of Boyd and the royal family of Stewart!

I learned later that Ms. Caldwell's account of the origin of the Boyd surname and the relationship to the Stewarts was substantially the same as reported by a William Phillip Boyd who wrote History of the Boyd Family and Its Descendants. Also, the story is compatible with the account given in Surnames of Scotland by George Fraser Black.

All seem to agree that both families originated in Brittany. According to Ms. Caldwell, the family was headed by a man named Feance who was the father of Alan. Alan was made honorary First Lord High Steward of Scotland by David I. The title was made hereditary by Malcolm IV. Alan was the father of Walter fitz Alan and another son Simon. Walter fitz Alan was progenitor of Walter the 6th who adopted the surname Stewart. Walter Stewart the 6th married Princess Marjorie Bruce and they were parents of Robert II who succeeded his uncle David as King of Scotland. That explains the entry of the Stewarts to the line of succession. The other son of Alan - Simon - was father of a son known as Robert the Fair. The Gaelic or Celtic word for fair is variously spelled boidt, boidel and buidhe. Because of his fair complexion, Robert the First was known as Robert Buidhe which was later changed to Boyd.

I found it interesting that the word steward originally meant sty warden or keeper of the pigs and amused that it became the title of a lofty position in the royal household. The High Steward had the responsibility of controlling the king's household above stairs and presided over the Board of Green Cloth. My curiosity was aroused and I checked to see what I could learn of the term. The following definition was found in the Oxford Universal Dictionary:

Green cloth, greencloth. 1536. In full, Board of Green Cloth. A department of the royal household, consisting of the Lord Steward and his subordinates, which has control of various matters of expenditure, and legal and judicial authority within the sovereigns court-royal, with power to correct offenders, and to maintain the peace of the verge of the court-royal, which extends every way two hundred yards from the gate of the palace (so called from the green-coloured table at which its business was originally transacted).

William Phillip Boyd wrote The History of the Boyd Family and its Descendants in 1912 and has provided an excellent outline of the descent of the Boyd family. A copy of the outline is found in the appendix.

My interest in the origin of the surnames of both the Boyds and Lockharts led me to study some ancient Scottish history. It was through that effort that I came across data pertaining to the part played by the Boyds during the reign of the Stewart (Stuart) kings, their prominence in government and their ultimate fall from power. While I cannot claim those Stewarts (Stuarts) and Boyds as lineal ancestors, I think most Boyds would be interested in the parts the Boyds played in the history of Scotland.

Since much concerning both Boyds and Lockharts involves Robert the Bruce, it seems appropriate to review a little about him and I will begin with his father, Robert the Competitor, who also had contended for the throne. Robert the Competitor (1210-1295) was the father of Robert the Bruce (who succeeded John Baliol as King of Scotland). The lordship of Annandale was conferred on Robert the Competitor by David I (the king who had designated Alan as the first Lord High Steward). Robert the Competitor was a son of Isabella, 2nd daughter of David, Earl of Huntingdon. His first marriage was to Isobel, daughter of Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucestershire and Hereford. His second wife was Christina, daughter of Sir William de Ireby. Robert the Competitor had tried to claim the throne after the death of Alexander III in 1286. However, Robert had sworn fealty to Edward I, King of England, and when the latter appointed John Baliol as King of Scotland, Robert resigned his rights to the throne to his son Robert (the Bruce) who had become Earl of Carrick.

Robert I (the Bruce): 1274-1329, succeeded John Baliol as King of Scots. He was a son of Robert the Competitor, Lord Annandale. When Baliol was attacked by Edward I in 1296, the young Robert Bruce sided with the English. However when Sir William Wallace, a son of Sir Malcolm Wallace of Elderslie who was a tenant of the Stewarts of Scotland, led an uprising it is said that Robert Bruce joined him but there is no evidence that Bruce took part in the battles of Stirling and Falkirk. After Wallace's defeat, Bruce continued to associate with those who maintained resistance, and in December 1298 he was appointed one of the guardians of the realm. Bruce submitted to Edward, probably because he feared a Baliol restoration under English auspices and thought that his lands, as well as his claim to the throne, might be in jeopardy. He remained in high favor with Edward for three years, until after Scottish resistance had been completely crushed and Wallace executed.

What circumstances caused Bruce to initiate a new resistance movement are not known, but after a quarrel with John Comyn, Baliol's nephew, in which Comyn was killed, Robert Bruce was inaugurated as King of Scots at Scone on 25 March 1306.

Robert I was crowned by Isabella, Countess of Buchan on 27 March 1306. On 18 June 1306 he was defeated in battle at Methven and fled into the wild country. He sent his Queen and daughter to a place called Kildrummy, whence they fled to Twain, but were captured by the English. Bruce disappeared from history until he turned up in his native Carrick early in 1307 to start a guerilla campaign there and in Galloway. He led many sorties and battles and eventually defeated the Mac Dougals in the Pass of Brander.

In March 1309, King Robert I was able to hold his first recorded Parliament at St. Andrews where declarations in his favour were made by clergy and nobles.

After the great victory at Bannockburn (24 June 1314) there were more raids into England and also a campaign in Ireland where Robert went in 1316 to support his brother Edward in the latter's bid for the throne of that country.

Meanwhile, the Scots were impatient with the Pope who had refused to recognize their king and the barons were prompted to send a letter to John XXII which is reckoned the Scottish Declaration of Independence (6 April 1320). Also, a mission to Avignon in 1323 persuaded the Pope to give Bruce the title of King. Finally, Bruce had gained all that he had fought for, and in 1329 the Pope conceded that the Kings of Scotland could be annointed as well as crowned. However, the papal bull arrived only after the death of Robert I on 7 June 1329.

Robert I (Bruce) had first married Isabella, daughter of Donald, Earl of Mar (circa 1295) by whom he had a daughter Marjory. His second marriage in 1302 was to Elizabeth (d. 1327) who was a daughter of the Earl of Ulster. It was she who bore the future David II as well as a son who died in infancy and two daughters.

In 1315, when Bruce had then no son, the succession was settled (with the concurrence of Princess Marjory Bruce) on Robert's brother Edward Bruce. Edward, who was styled Lord of Galloway in 1309, was created Earl of Carrick probably in 1313.

Invited to assist in the nationalist movement in Ireland, Edward landed at Larne in May 1315 and was crowned King of Ireland almost a year later on 2 May 1316 but he was defeated and killed at Dundalk on 14 October 1318 leaving no lawful issue. Marjory Bruce was also dead by then and the crown was settled (in the event Robert I died without an heir) on Robert Stewart (son of Princess Marjory Bruce and Walter the 6th Stewart). However, Robert I did have issue through his second wife Elizabeth (daughter of the Earl of Ulster) and that son became successor to Robert I as David II.

David II, King of Scots (1324-1371) the only surviving son of Robert I (by his second marriage) had been born on 5 March 1324. That was after the succession had already been settled on Edward Bruce, brother of Robert I, in 1315. Also, it was after the crown had been settled on Robert Stewart after the death of Edward Bruce in 1318. As the surviving male heir, David II succeeded to the throne on the death of Robert I on 7 June 1329.

In terms of the Succession Acts of 1315 and 1318, Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray, was nominated guardian of the Kingdom in the event of King Robert leaving a minor as his heir and on the king's death in 1329, Randolph, therefore, became Regent for David II. During David's minority there were a succession of Guardians. David had been married in his fifth year to Joanna, sister of Edward II of England. He was the first Scottish king to be anointed at his coronation. The young king and his wife were sent to France for safety in May 1334. Robert Stewart, later to become Robert II, and John Randolph, Earl of Moray, were now joint guardians and soon after the Scots began having more successes.

By 1341, it was thought safe to bring the "stout, young and jolly King Davie" back from France. David invaded England and was defeated and captured at Neville's Cross, near Durham on 17 October 1346. He remained a prisoner for eleven years, though with one visit to Scotland when he tried to arrange for a ransom. David was later ransomed for a sum of 100,000 merks payable in ten annual installments. (Merk was the Scottish spelling of mark).

David had made little headway against factious nobles between 1341 and 1346 and during his captivity Robert Stewart had been an ineffective governor. David had no heir, either by Queen Joanna (d. 14 August 1362) nor by Margared Drummond who he married in 1364 and divorced in 1370. He had no liking for his nephew and heir designate, Robert Stewart, and tried to avoid the succession of Robert. David II died on 22 February 1371.

In order to spell out the entry of the Stewarts to the line of succession with the crowning of Robert II (son of Walter the 6th and Princess Marjory Bruce) and the relationship of the Boyds to the royal family it is best to review their descent. Robert the First (Robert Boyd) and Robert II (Robert Stewart) were both descendants of Alan whose father had been Feance. Alan was married to Margaret, daughter of Tergus (or Fergus) Earl of Galloway. Robert Stewart became successor to the throne through his mother Princess Marjory Bruce.

The coronation of Robert II was in 1371. The World Book Encyclopedia lists the reign of the Stewarts (although they use the French spelling Stuart) as extending from 1371 to 1603 in Scotland; both England and Scotland from 1603 to 1715; and England through the reign of Anne Stuart who became Queen of England in 1702 and it was during her reign that England and Scotland were united into the single nation known as Great Britain.

George Fraser Black in Surnames of Scotland gives a good account of the origin of the surname Stewart. Black stated: "...Many people imagine that all persons bearing the name Stewart (or its variant spellings) are of royal descent, but it must be borne in mind that there were stewards and stewards, as King James the Sixth emphasized when he said that all Stewarts were not 'sib' to the king." In spite of that, with the descent of the Boyd family from the same progenitor as that of the family

Robert Stewart (Robert I) it seems fairly conclusive that the Boyds were indeed related to the royal family of Stewart.

It is an historical fact that the noble family of Boyd and the royal family of Stewart were associated and inter-married at least during the reign of the Stewart family in Scotland. During the reign of James III, Robert Lord Boyd held prominent place in government but finally was found guilty of treason and had to flee into exile. That story is recounted here and I hope others will get pleasure, as I did, from learning some of the early history of our forebears.

James III was the eldest surviving son of James II and was born in May 1452 (1452-1488). Durings his minority - he had been eight years of age when he took the throne - James was first influenced by his mother Mary of Gueldres (d. 1463) and then by a Bishop Kennedy until the latter's death in 1465. In the latter years of the minority, power lay with the Boyd family. Robert Boyd, whose father was a son-in-law of James II, was created Lord Boyd on 18 July 1454. On the death of James II, he was one of the Regents appointed to act in the minority. In 1466, his brother Sir Alexander Boyd was appointed instructor to the king in military exercises and on 10 July 1466 Robert Lord Boyd and Sir Alexander Boyd, in effect, kidnapped the king and carried him to Edinburgh Castle (of which Alexander Boyd was the keeper). After several months of confinement, the king appeared before Parliament on 13 October 1466 and gave his public approval of the Boyd's actions and a few days later Parliament declared Lor Robert Boyd sole Governor of the Realm. In August 1467, Lord Boyd was appointed Chamberlain and went on embassies to England and Denmark, the latter for the purpose of concluding a treaty of marriage between James III and Princess Margaret by which the Norwegian crown's lands and rights in Orkney were pledged as part of her dowry. Sir Thomas Boyd, son of Lord Robert Boyd, went to Denmark to bring Princess Margaret to Scotland. Earlier it had been stated that Sir Thomas Boyd was married to Mary Stewart, daughter of James II, and he had been created Earl of Arran. (It is said that the king was displeased and kept his sister in confinement until she was later divorced and then married a Lord Hamilton who then became Earl of Arran). One source says that Mary Stewart had two children by Thomas Boyd but another source states that she had no children by the first marriage.

While Sir Thomas Boyd was absent on his mission to bring the bride-to-be from Denmark, enemies of the Boyds contrived against them and Lord Robert Boyd, Sir Alexander Boyd and Sir Thomas Boyd were found guilty of treason. Mary, wife of Thomas Boyd, met him on his return and advised him of his plight and he stayed aboard and returned to Denmark. Lord Robert Boyd fled into exile and Sir Alexander Boyd was beheaded on High Hill. Sir Thomas Boyd was forfeited and died at Antwerp, Flanders in 1471. Princess Margaret married James III on 13 July 1469. Mary, by her second marriage to James, First Lord Hamilton, had a son who was created Earl of Arran. Their daughter Mary married the second Earl of Lennox and thus transmitted a place in the line of succession to that family.

With the forfeit of the Boyds in 1469, I thought I had the answer to why the Boyds later migrated to Ireland as tenant farmers and explained how I happen to descend from "the poor relatives"! However, the Boyds were not all without funds after that and the Boyds held forth as Earls of Kilmarnock from 1316 to 1748 which continued, of course, long after the migration of our Boyd ancestors to Ulster. Dean Castle of Kilmarnock is recognized as the family seat of the Boyds. That is of more than passing interest because many of the Boyds with whom our family were associated and intermarried also bore the surname Dean. Also, of interest is a notation about Deans Castle which indicates that Deans Castle had belonged to Locard or Lockharts before it became home to the Boyds! (Dean's Castle is now maintained as a museum).

At one time, the Boyds had the "right of pit and gallows". One Lord Thomas Boyd had a gallows erected at Kilmarnock and it was known as "Gallows Knowe" and it stood until 1861. The gallows was for the purpose of hanging men and a pit was maintained for drowning women and children who failed to do as they were requested or were enemies to the will of the Boyds!

After a fire at Dean Castle, William Boyd, Fourth Earl of Kilmarnock lived at Marnock House. His family lived there from 1316 (which would have been during the time that Robert Bruce was King of Scotland). Other descendants of Simon and Robert the First (Boyd) lived at places such as: Badenheath, Portincross, Yester, Kilwinning, Duncan, Bousham, Pentville, Flushing, Bedbay, Aberdeenshire and probably many more places in Scotland and our immediate Boyd ancestors might have come from any of those places.

William Boyd, Fourth Earl of Kilmarnock, was a prominent Boyd. He had married Lady Ann Livingston whose background was diametrically opposed to his. Lady Anne's people had been Episcopalians or Jacobites. The consensus seemed to be that the impoverished and ambitious Earl was more interested in her two estates, Callendar and Linlithgow and the Earldom of Errol than he was in Ann. They were married in 1724. In the publication The Boyds of Kilmarnock put out by Dick Institute of Kilmarnock, Scotland, there is an excellent account of the life of William Boyd. He led an interesting life which was culminated with his support of Bonnie Prince Charles in the latter's effort to achieve the independence of Scotland. Fighting with the Jacobites against the Hanoverians who were led by the Duke of Cumberland, the Earl was taken prisoner at the battle of Drummoisie Moor at Culloden on 16 April 1746. Ironically, one of his sons had also joined the Jacobites while another son, James, joined the Hanoverian Royal Scots Fusiliers. The Earl, by chance, fell into the hands of James' unit and as a prisoner was being led bareheaded through its ranks when his son Lord James Boyd dashed forward and offered his father his own hat. Charles, the other son, was also taken prisoner.

Lord William Boyd was tried and executed. His title and estates were confiscated. He had been survived by three sons: Robert Boyd, Earl of Errol; Charles Boyd (who had been taken prisoner with the Jacobites) and William Boyd. I don't know what had happened to James of the Royal Scots Fusiliers.

Robert Boyd, the Earl of Errol was called Lord Boyd. It is said that by a trust which was confirmed by the House of Peers in 1752, he recovered the land of Kilmarnock, forfeited by his father, and this was sold afterwards to the Earl of Glencairn. Upon the death of his great-aunt, the Countess of Errol in her own right, he succeeded to the title of Errol in 1758. The sale of title of his forefathers closed the last title of the Boyds in Scotland. This had been handed down from one generation to another for nearly eight hundred years. He then took up his residence at Slains Castle, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, situated upon the sea coast.

Soon after the fight at Drummoissie Moor, Charles Boyd fled to the Island of Arran, the ancient property of the Boyds, where he concealed himself for a year. He then went to France and married a French lady and resided there for about twenty years, when a pardon was granted to all the rebels, and he returned again to his native country and resided with his brother in Aberdeenshire: Note: The above section, where it was stated that he had been taken prisoner was apparently in error!

William Boyd was in the Royal Navy and was promoted in 1761 to a company of the Fourteenth Infantry. Being close to the time of the Revolutionary War, he may have been sent to America with his regiment. Some Boyd families of today connect their lineage to him, or to a Boyd of that name, who settled in the middle or eastern states.

CHAPTER V. BOYDS OF DONEGAL

The Boyds who migrated to Donegal are believed to have been among the 150,000 Scottish Presbyterians who took a part in the Plantation of Ulster about 1610 and thereafter. It has not been determined exactly when they came but it is said that the Lockharts have owned their land at Drim-mitten for almost 400 years and it is believed that the Boyds arrived in the area about the same time. Most of the planters crossed the Irish Sea by a ferry between Rynnes of Galloway, Portpatrick and Donaghadee. Precisely where in Scotland they came from has not been settled but in a previous section it was pointed out that the seat of the Boyd family was at Dean Castle, Kilmarnock and there were many towns identified as likely places from which "our" Boyds might have come. Kilmarnock is in Ayrshire which is near Lanarkshire from which "our" Lockharts are believed to have come. In the ancient history of the Boyds, I mentioned that Robert the Competitor had been created Lord Annandale. Several hundreds of years later, John Murray who had the patent for the area where the Boyds settled was also an Earl of Annandale. Also, early undertakers included some who bore the surname Stewart. This is pointed out here to support the conjecture that the Boyds might have been tenants of the Annandales and Stewarts in Scotland before their migration to Ireland. Since the 'undertakers' as those who received patents for grants of land in the Plantation were called were required to settle a given number of Scottish inland Presbyterian farmers on their lands within a relatively short period of time, it seemed likely that they would recruit tenants for their new holdings from among their old tenants in Scotland. However, I wrote to Mr. James D. Galbraith, who was Assistant Keeper of the Scottish Record Office in hope that he might be able to identify the Boyds of Ayrshire as the emigrants but he thinks there is little basis for the conjecture that the early Boyds had been associated with the Annandales at the time of the plantation.

Mr. Galbraith did point out that "A number of the principal undertakers in 1609 were certainly Steuarts (sic) but these had no connection with the Earl of Annandale's interests. One minor undertaker, William Stewart of Mains from Kircudbright took up a proportion of the Barony of Boylagh and Banagh Barony, which was held by John Murray, later Earl of Annandale, but there is no indication that this was in any way determined by an earlier association between the Stuart (sic) and Annandale families." Further, according to Mr. Galbraith, "The surnames are certainly found in that country during the late 17th and 18th centuries but the earliest notices of these surnames in the available records associate them primarily with Lanarkshire and Ayrshire." Lanarkshire was the seat of the Lockharts and Ayrshire the seat of the Boyd families. It should be pointed out that as late as 1857 the lands occupied by the Boyds and Lockharts at the "point" were listed as having been leased to one H. G. Murray-Stewart who was listed as "Lessor" in Griffith's Valuation of Tenements of 1857 and the Boyds and Lockharts were listed as occupants of portions of the lands leased to him.

The oldest Boyd I have been able to trace among our Boyds at Loughros Point is a Hugh Boyd¹. I arbitrarily identified him as of generation one so that the generations of Boyds would be compatible with the generation number assigned their contemporaries among the Lockharts. There were several Hugh Boyd¹ in the area and among them was my great great grandfather Hugh Boyd¹. I have not yet learned the name of his spouse but there is a possibility that her given name might have been Isabella. That guess is made because the farm on which my great great grandfather lived was some time later referred to as "Isabella's Farm". That may very well have been as the name Isabella appears frequently among her descendants. On the assumption that great great grandfather Hugh Boyd¹ probably was born about 1800 (based on birth dates of children and allowing 25-30 years per generation) there would have been a gap of 175-200 years from the beginning of the Plantation until his time. During that time there could have been as many as six additional generations of Boyds in the area of Loughros Point before the birth of my great great grandfather.

Hugh Boyd¹ was father of the Five Boyd Brothers and their two sisters who were Susanna and Jane². Those seven are "heads" of specific groups I have identified and their "trees" are very extensive. Many of our present day Boyds can trace their lineage back to one of them.

As has been repeated many times, considering the unaccounted generations and the intermarriages, probably all of the Boyds of the area can be traced back to a few pairs of ancestors. If the story of the father, daughter and three sons is true, it is quite possible that all the Boyds could be traced to those three sons. Some of the Boyds of Drimmitten have been intermarried with the Boyds of the Rosses and some have been intermarried from both places with the Boyds of the vicinity of Dunkineely and environs. Generally, they made their homes in the area from which the male Boyds came. That was not true in all cases, of course, as men moved onto farms which their spouses had inherited. For example, Jane Boyd² of Drimmitten went to The Rosses to live and Jane Boyd of The Rosses went to Drimmitten.

Many of the Boyds at "the point" married and moved into houses very close to their places of birth and eventually some of their children moved back into the homes where their parents had been born. The house where Alexander Boyd and Rebecca Long lived is a good example and there seemed to be a good bit of movement of Boyds in and out of that house and I had difficulty in determining who had lived there over the years. In the case of the "old Boyd home at Drimmitten" and the "old Lockhart home at Drimmitten" direct descendants still live in those houses.

I have already mentioned the problem of sorting out the people with the same given and surnames and of like generations. There were at least two Hugh Boyd² at Laccaduff and each produced a line of descendants. There was also a Hugh Boyd² at Drimmitten. It was exceedingly difficult to sort out the various Boyds and it soon became apparent that they could not be categorized by generation numbers. In desperation, I finally devised a system of assigning identification numbers to individuals and assigned an alphabetical designation as the first digit of the ID number. As a start, I chose to assign the alphabetical designation to each of the seven children of Hugh Boyd¹ of Drimmitten as each had been recognized as "head" of a group. All "heads" of groups were not of the same generation but were chosen because of their prominence. For example, my great Grandmother Susanna Boyd Lockhart² is head of Group "A" while Mary Jane Boyd Lockhart³ is head of Group "I". To the extent possible, I chose the generation number as the second digit. I then allowed for four additional digits to accommodate as many as 999 descendants in that generation bracket of that particular group. Susanna Boyd Lockhart² is "head" of Group "A" and is second generation and her ID number is A20001 while her spouse Alexander Lockhart² is "head" of Group "K" and his ID number is K20001. However, they are listed in each group so each has two ID numbers, i.e. A20001 and K20002 and K20001 and A20002. Because of the many intermarriages, many appear in many family trees and are included in more than one group and some have as many as eight ID numbers. To date, I have eighteen groups from "A" through "R". As each new generation comes along, that generation can be added to the proper group or groups. As of now, I have accounted for nine generations in some groups.

Unfortunately, there are Boyds of Donegal who are known to me but I have not been able to associate them with other groups. Among them are the Boyds of Devitt's Cottage and those of Kilcashel and some of The Rosses other than those descended from Richard Boyd¹ and Jane Boyd¹. Some of these people are already accounted for because of their marriage into known groups but I do not have enough data about them to list them in separate groups. Incidentally, the confusion about names was not restricted to the Hugh Boyds - for instance, Richard Boyd¹ of The Rosses had married Jane Boyd¹ of Drimmitten who went to live at The Rosses. There were at least three Richard Boyds who married Jane Boyds!

My next planned trip to Ireland may help me to better understand the relationship of the Boyds presently not categorized and my correspondence with Boyds in Australia may eventually lead me to an understanding of where they fit into the family but for the present it seems the chore of completing the record will have to be left to others.

A constant concern is that I will not be able to get this all together in the time allotted to me and I doubt if anyone can unscramble all my notes and records and put it together. It is difficult for me to understand much of it and, no doubt, there are many inaccuracies. Sometimes, I get impatient to get it done but something comes along which raises my hope of getting just a little more data about a few more people and the project goes on and on. Much of the data may be lost beyond recall and it is frustrating that there is information available which would be of vital interest to at least some of our progeny and it cannot be recorded because those who have the information will not share it. Spirits go "sky high" when you get each new bit of data but "sink to the depths" when you wait in vain for a response from someone you know can answer a query.

The following is a list of the group designations and "heads" as of this writing:

"A"	Susanna Boyd ²	Drimmitten
"B"	Jane Boyd ²	Rosses
"C"	Hugh Boyd ²	Drimmitten
"D"	Richard Boyd ²	"
"E"	James Boyd ²	"
"F"	Robert Boyd ²	"
"G"	Thomas Boyd ²	Seaview
"H"	Hugh Boyd ²	Laccaduff
"I"	Mary Jane Boyd ³	Laccaduff
"J"	Richard Boyd ¹	Rosses
"K"	Alex. Lockhart ²	Drimmitten
"L"	Oliver Lockhart ³	Drumaghy
"M"	Thomas Lockhart ³	Colorado

"N"	Ann Lockhart ³	Drimaha
"O"	Margaret Lockhart ³	Drimaha
"P"	Isabella Lockhart ³	Drimaha
"Q"	William Lockhart ²	Drimmitten
"R"	Hugh Boyd ²	Laccaduff

In the above list, Alexander Lockhart² "head" of Group "K" is spouse of Susanna Boyd² "head" of Group "A". There are two groups identifying progeny because the same categories are applicable to the Lockharts as well as the Boyds. In the cases of Lockharts in "L" through "P" there are not so many inter-marriages with the Boyds but there are a few instances. Many of the Lockharts in those Groups intermarried with Adairs, Colvins, Deans, etc. and in that way were related through those families to the Boyds.

After all the time I have devoted to a study of the Boyds, the relationships are not all clear to me. On my arrival at Loughros Point, I learned that all the Boyds were "not related to us"! For example, one of my earliest experiences was my first view of Devitt's Cottage. I was told that "old John Devitt" had owned the cottage and small farm which he had bought from a Robert Boyd the Methodist. About 1904, Thomas Boyd who had been in America for about ten years returned and bought Devitt's Cottage which was then occupied by his son Thomas Ernest Boyd. I was very interested because "old John Devitt" was my great grandfather. I knew very little about my great grandfather and with that interest, I tried to learn as much as possible about what I call "Devitt's Cottage Boyds". I learned that Thomas Boyd³ (who had returned from America) was a son of Alexander Boyd² and Rebecca Long² (of Summy, Portnoo). In addition to Thomas Boyd³, Alexander Boyd² and Rebecca Long² were parents of:

George Boyd ³	m. Lizzie Lamond
Florence Boyd ³	m. Patrick John Boyd
Rebecca Boyd ³	m. Thomas Lockhart
Isabella Boyd ³	m. W. Dennis Guilfoyle
Ellen Boyd ³	m. John Crummer
Susanna (Annie) Boyd ³	m. William L. Boyd
John Boyd ³	m. Cassie Boyd
Alexander Boyd ³	m.
Elizabeth Boyd ³	m.

Thomas Boyd for whom Devitt's Cottage was bought, had married Margaret (Maggie Ann) Boyd. Now, before going any further, I should review the sibblings of Thomas Boyd of Devitt's Cottage:

Rebecca Boyd married Thomas Lockhart³ who was my grandmother Annie Lockhart Devitt's brother.

Isabella Boyd married W. Dennis Guilfoyle and lived in Akron, Ohio.

Ellen Boyd married John Crummer and lived in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Susanna (Annie) Boyd married William L. Boyd of Laccaduff and they also lived in Pittsburgh, Pa.

John Boyd married Cassie (nee) Boyd and they too lived in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Thomas Boyd married Maggie Ann (nee) Boyd and lived at Devitt's Cottage where the following children were born:

Jane Boyd	m.	James Boyd
Rebecca Boyd	m.	Thomas Morrow
Annie Boyd	nm.	(Parkinsons Disease)
Alexander Boyd	m.	Rachel Boyd
Florence Boyd	m.	Thomas Boyd
Ena Boyd	m.	Harry Burden
Thos. Ernest Boyd	m.	Susan Mgt. Rainey

I don't propose to outline all of the Boyds in this fashion as they can be found on "trees" elsewhere but the foregoing were not included in any of the groups except to the extent that some had married into the other groups, i.e. Rebecca Boyd who married Thomas Lockhart³. It can be noted here that there were relationships which even the Boyds did not suspect.

Thomas Ernest Boyd, a descendant of the Thomas Boyd who was the first occupant of Devitt's Cottage after my great grandfather John Devitt is the present owner of the cottage and lives there with his family. The man who owned the cottage prior to the time my great grandfather purchased it in 1867 was Robert Boyd (the Methodist) and it is said that the cottage was used for church meetings. It is said that in order to induce the farmers to attend services, Robert Boyd volunteered to help them stack their hay so that they would have time to attend services. Also, it was the same Robert Boyd who salvaged the timbers from the vessel Aurora which was wrecked off the "point" and the timbers were used to build the Wesley School on the farm of my great grandmother Susanna Boyd Lockhart². After the sale of the cottage to my great grandfather, Robert Boyd and most of his family migrated to Australia. I number his descendants there among my correspondents.

My knowledge of the Boyds of Australia came about through my efforts to locate a John Devitt who had also migrated to that area from Loughros Point. That effort led me to the Boyds of Australia. It was through that correspondence that I learned that the John Devitt I sought had been married to an Elizabeth Boyd and that she was related to Robert Boyd the Methodist. One of my correspondents sent me some pictures, one of which depicted what she identified as "the old Boyd home" at Loughros Point. I immediately recognized it as Devitt's Cottage. In addition, there were pictures of a group of people in front of a cottage which I later learned was the family of John Boyd. Apparently the cottage pictured was the home of Hugh Boyd² and Susan Lockhart² and I believe the latter was a sister of my great grandfather Alexander Lockhart². The John Boyd in the picture was a brother of Mary Jane Boyd³ who was "head" of Group "I". Since Mary Jane Boyd is one of "ours" then there must be a relationship between the family of Robert Boyd the Methodist and our Boyd family. Further ground for believing that they were related is based on the fact that the Australians had identified Hugh Lockhart Boyd³ and his brother William L. Boyd³ of Pittsburgh, Pa. as their relatives. They, in fact, were brothers of the John Boyd³ and Mary Jane Boyd mentioned above.

There is no point in trying to write details about all of the Boyds and the reader can find the line of descent in other sections pertaining to "trees" and biographical data. However, mention should be made of Billy Boyd who is the present caretaker of Kilcasha Cemetery. Billy Boyd is a grandson of the Thomas Boyd who bought Devitt's Cottage. He is very knowledgeable about who is buried at the cemetery and is very helpful. Apparently his family have been caretakers of the cemetery for many generations.

Although I had been associated with the Boyds all of my life and knew we were related, the connection was not clear until I learned that my great grandmother Susanna had been a Boyd. Even after I first knew that her maiden name had been Boyd it was quite a while before I could determine that her given name was Susanna. Susanna Boyd² was one of seven children of a Hugh Boyd¹ who had a farm at Drimmitten. The farm is still in the hands of the Boyd family and the fact that it was, at one time, known as Isabella's Farm gives rise to speculation that my great great grandmother might have been Isabella (surname not known). I visited at the home there but did not realize at the time that it was the ancestral home of my Boyd relatives. It was only after I came home that I realized the significance of that visit. In addition to great grandmother Susanna Boyd² there was a daughter Jane Boyd² and five sons who are referred to as the Five Boyd Brothers. Each of the seven children in this family is "head" of a group. Jane Boyd² went to The Rosses to live when she married Richard Boyd². Susanna had married Alexander Lockhart² and lived at Bayview Farm, Drimmitten. Brothers Hugh and Richard Boyd² were unmarried and remained on the home farm. Subsequently, a Hugh Boyd³ (son of Jane Boyd² and Richard Boyd² of The Rosses) came to Drimmitten and married an Isabella Boyd³. They lived on the Boyd home farm with the two bachelor uncles and on their death he inherited the farm. Descendants of Hugh Boyd³ are the present owners. Hugh Boyd³ and Isabella (nee) Boyd³ were parents of: Robert, Richard and Florence Boyd⁴. Robert Boyd⁴ inherited the home farm and married Catherine (nee) Boyd⁴ who was a daughter of Thomas Boyd³ and Rachel Baskin³. Robert Boyd⁴ and Catherine (nee) Boyd⁴ were parents of Hugh Thomas, Isabella Ann, and Rachel Boyd⁵. Hugh Thomas Boyd⁵ married Isabella Hanlon⁵ (of Tullyard) and Isabella Ann Boyd who is not married makes her home with them. Rachel Boyd⁵ married Alexander Boyd⁵ of the Devitt's Cottage Boyds and they live on a lane very near the lane leading to Bayview. The house in which they live is believed to have been the home of Thomas Boyd³ and Rachel Baskin³.

Robert Boyd², another of the five brothers married an Anna Long. It is believed that Anna Long was a sister of Rebecca Long whose spouse was Alexander Boyd of Laccaduff and grandmother of Thomas Ernest Boyd of Devitt's Cottage. Robert and Anna lived at Drimmitten but the location of their house is not known to me. As far as I know, in addition to the Isabella Boyd³ who married Hugh Boyd³ (of The Rosses) and went to live at the old home farm, there was a Florence Boyd³ who was unmarried and continued to live at Drimmitten and a Jane Boyd³ who married Andy Adair³. That is all I know of the family of Robert Boyd².

Thomas Boyd², also one of the five brothers, married a Florence Boyd³. Florence was of a younger generation and was a daughter of Hugh Boyd² and Susan Lockhart² of Laccaduff. Thomas Boyd² and Florence Boyd³ were progenitors of the Boyds I identify as the Seaview Boyds. Seaview is also very near Bayview and the two lanes go off on tangents from one lane off the highway. The Seaview descendants were numerable and the reader can find their line of descent in the "trees" and biographical section. Of this family, William Henry Boyd⁴ inherited the home and his descendants still occupy Seaview.

Another Thomas Boyd³ had been born at Laccaduff, also a son of a Hugh Boyd². This Thomas was not of the five brothers and he married Rachel Baskin³. The three children of this couple married the three children of Hugh Boyd³ and Isabella Boyd³. A list of the descendants of Thomas Boyd³ and Rachel Baskin³ is also found in the other sections,

James Boyd², the last of the five brothers, also made his home at Drimmitten a short ways off from Bayview. James had married a Catherine (surname unknown) and they were parents of seven children. One child, Hugh Boyd³ married Eliza Jane Morrow and remained in Ireland while the other children migrated to the United States. Son James Boyd³ lived in Pittsburgh, Pa. but moved with his wife Eliza Ritchie to Rushville, Illinois where they were parents of a large family. Son Richard also lived in Pittsburgh, Pa. for a while but he, too, went to live at Rushville. Richard and his wife Jessie Achman³ were parents of a son Clarence Boyd⁴. Margaret Boyd³, daughter of James Boyd² and Catherine, married Robert Boyd³ (son of Thomas Boyd² and Florence Boyd³ of Seaview). Margaret Boyd³ and Robert Boyd⁴ were parents of Thomas Wesley Boyd⁵. Yet another Thomas Boyd³, a son of James Boyd² and Catherine, was well known among the Pittsburgh Boyds and known to all as Old Tom Boyd. Old Tom had married and had a daughter Ruth Boyd⁴ who was not married and a son Thomas Boyd⁴ who had a son. The names of spouses of Old Tom and his son are not known. Another daughter of James Boyd² was Susanna Boyd³ who also lived in Pittsburgh, Pa. but I have learned nothing more about her. Finally, the last of the seven children of James Boyd² was Isabella (Bella) Boyd³. Bella Boyd³ had married Robert (Paddy) Maxwell³ and they were well known to me when I was a child as they lived a very short distance from where I was born and Bella was a frequent visitor at the home of my grandmother. An outline of the Maxwell family is found with the group headed by James Boyd².

Both Old Tom Boyd and Bella Maxwell were really first cousins of my grandmother Annie Lockhart Devitt but I never would have guessed the relationship and just thought that they were good friends. That should not surprise me as I have learned that others I had thought only as good friends were also first cousins of my grandmother.

I think the foregoing accounts for most of the Boyds from Drimmitten. The other townland where many of our family lived was Laccaduff. You can look from the houses of one town to the houses of the other so they are very close together. I have mentioned Devitt's Cottage which was at Laccaduff. Also, I had mentioned that the home of John Boyd³ and Kate Colvin⁴ was there. Mary Jane Boyd³ of Laccaduff had married Alexander Lockhart³ of Drimmitten (brother of my grandmother) and went to Drimmitten to live. Of the many siblings of Mary Jane Boyd³, it is best to mention John Boyd³, her brother, again. John Boyd³ had remained on the home place. John Boyd³ had married Kate Colvin⁴ and since her name was not Boyd nor Lockhart, I used her over and over again as a reference point. At least, I knew who I was talking about when relating others to Kate Colvin⁴!

The problem of pinpointing specific families is again complicated in trying to identify the families of Laccaduff. Another Hugh Boyd² of Laccaduff, not to be confused with the Hugh Boyd² who was father of Mary Jane Boyd (Lockhart)³, et al, was the father of John James Boyd³. As in other cases, it would help if we knew the names of the spouses but, unfortunately, they are not known and we have the riddle of the names. Although the lines of descent are spelled out in the "tree" section, it seems best to try to identify the members of this family here. to help alleviate the confusion, this group is headed by Daniel Boyd³ and is designated Group "H". This Hugh Boyd² was father of:

Daniel Boyd ³	m.	(1st) Jane (nee) ³ Boyd ³
		(2nd) Jane Kenny ³
John Boyd ³	nm.
Catherine Boyd ³	m.	George Morrow ³
Sarah Boyd ³	m.	Alexander Ketterson ³
Thomas Boyd ³	m.	Rachel Baskin ³
Alexander Boyd ³	m.	Rebecca (nee) Boyd ³

Daniel Boyd³ had first married Jane (nee) Boyd³ of The Rosses. She was a daughter of Jane Boyd² (sister of the five Boyd brothers) and Richard Boyd². Of that first marriage, Daniel Boyd³ was father of:

Hugh Boyd ⁴	m.	Maryanne Moore ⁴
Eliza Annie Boyd ⁴	m.	(1st) Thos. A. Gartley ⁴
		(2nd) Michael Keating ⁴
Richard Boyd ⁴	m.	Evaline Cook ⁴
Cassie Boyd ⁴	m.	John Boyd ⁴

Daniel Boyd³, by his 2nd marriage, to Jane Kenny was father of:

Mary Jane Boyd ⁴	m.	John Moore ⁴
John James Boyd ⁴	m.	Sophia Watson ⁴
Sophia Isabella Boyd ⁴	m.	William Sproull ⁴
Isabella Mgt. Boyd	nm.

Other descendants of this Hugh Boyd² of Laccaduff will be found in the family tree section.

The other main area yet to be considered is The Rosses. We have already identified some of the Boyds of The Rosses through marriages with Boyds of other groups. One specific group of people of The Rosses is Group "J" headed by Richard Boyd².

Immediately above is a list of the children of Jane Boyd³ of The Rosses who went to live at Laccaduff when she married Daniel Boyd³. A Jane Boyd⁴ of The Rosses, daughter of Richard Boyd³ and Elizabeth (nee) Boyd³ of Corker went to live at Drimmitten when she married Hugh Lockhart³, the Schoolmaster and brother of my grandmother Annie Lockhart Devitt³. See their progeny in the "tree" section.

There were other Boyds in The Rosses whom I have not placed in proper perspective. For example there was Johnny (of The Rosses) Boyd who married Mary Jane Blair. He was a son of John Boyd and Bella Adair. Johnny of The Rosses and Mary Jane Blair were parents of:

Isabella Jane Boyd m. Joseph Boyd
Harry Boyd
Guy Boyd
Joseph Boyd
John Boyd
Margaret Boyd (Maggie)

Isabella Boyd and Joseph Boyd above were parents of:

Hilda Boyd
Annie Mary Boyd m. Walker
Eliz. Ann Boyd (Lily) m. Richard Edwin Boyd

A James Boyd is said to have married Annie Wilson and they were parents of:

Joseph Boyd m. Isabella Jane Boyd
Guy Boyd nm. (1893- 11 Dec. 1980)

A Catherine Boyd of The Rosses had married a Thomas Boyd and they lived at Loughros Point and were parents of:

Annie Boyd
David Boyd
Sandy Boyd
Ellen Jane Boyd
John Boyd
James Boyd
Florence Boyd (b. 26 January 1875)

A Jane Boyd³, possibly a sister of Catherine Boyd above) is also believed to have come from The Rosses to live at Loughros Point. She had married an Alexander Boyd. It is believed that Jane Boyd, Catherine Boyd and James Boyd of The Rosses (who had married Annie Wilson) were siblings. At any rate, it seems that Jane Boyd³ and Alexander Boyd³ were parents of.

Thomas Boyd ⁴	(Big Tommy)	1871	m.	Bella Burns
David Boyd		1881
Maggie Ann Boyd		1885	m.	Thos. Boyd of
Isabella Boyd		1887		Devitt's Cottage
Helena Boyd		1876	m.	Andrew Richardson
Patrick John Boyd		1875	m.	Florence (nee) Boyd
James Boyd			m.	Rebecca Hanlon
Cassie Jane Boyd
Ellen Boyd		20 Dec. 1872

It can readily be seen that much work remains to be done to make a comprehensive record of the Boyds of Donegal but it is also apparent that they must all be related in some fashion. The families of Catherine and Thomas Boyd as well as those of Jane Boyd and Alexander Boyd are listed in the 1901 Donegal Census as living at Drimmitten but both Catherine and Jane are said to be from The Rosses.

Some of the Boyds at Kilcashel descend from some of the Boyds of Devitt's Cottage, i.e. from Jane Boyd. There are others in the area who have not been properly placed as yet and they seem to have descended from a James Boyd who was the second husband of Susan Morrow. This James Boyd is said to have come from "the far point" and perhaps someone more knowledgeable can tell us what the name of the town at "the far point" is. For what it may mean to others, it is said that this James Boyd is the grandfather of Virginia Kleva who is a descendant of Ephraim Morrow and Susan Hamilton. This James Boyd is also said to be a son of a Robert Boyd but the latter's relationship to others has not been established. However, the Boyds of Devitt's Cottage married into the family which began with James Boyd and Susan Morrow.

There is an interesting story about the marriage of Susan Morrow to her first husband whose surname is said to have been Dorian. The story is supported by some and denied by others. As reported, it seems that by her first marriage to Dorian, Susan was mother of two sons. Actually, whether they were actually married is not known as one version of the story is that Dorian would not marry Susan unless she converted. Whatever the reason, it is said that Dorian who was a Roman Catholic left her and took his two sons to America and later was killed in a fracas over a card game. Nothing is known of what became of the two sons. Another story connected with this couple is that James Boyd had been previously married to a Catholic girl. Whatever the truth, Susan Morrow was married to James Boyd of "the far point". Susan and husband moved in with the Morrrows at Kilcashed. Her father lived in a thatched house in front of the old slate roofed house. When old Alexander Morrow got sick, Susan and James took him in and cared for him. He was ill for a long time and died in the upper room. On his death, James and Susan "came into" the home place "Kilcashed" after Alexander Morrow and Sarah Bryce died and son Ephriam had departed to America. The 'flags' from the old house are said to still be stacked in the yard. Thomas William Boyd (Billy) is the present caretaker of the cemetery and lives in the old Morrow house.

James Boyd and Susan Morrow were parents of:

Sarah Boyd	m. John Berry
Jane Boyd	m. George Crummer
Margaret Boyd	m. Charles McKee
William Boyd	m. Isabella Hamilton

William Boyd who had married Isabella Hamilton apparently was father of:

Sarah Boyd	} twins	m. William Adair
Catherine Boyd		m. Jane Boyd
James Boyd		m. George Elliott
Isabella Boyd		m. Todeleah Hollaway
William Boyd		m. William Baskin
Susan Boyd
Andrew Boyd

James Boyd who had married Jane Boyd of Devitt's Cottage was the father of:

Isabel Mgt. Ann Boyd	m. Walter Mayhew
Thos. Wm. Boyd (Billy)	m. Margaret Ellen Dunleavy (Madeline)
James Boyd

Scanty as it is, that is the best I have been able to do with the Boyds of Kilcashed. Earlier, I had noted that it would be shown that the Boyds of Kilcashed were related to the Boyds of Devitt's Cottage at least by marriage and that was through the marriage of James Boyd and Jane Boyd as listed above.

CHAPTER VI. THE ANCIENT FAMILY OF LOCKHART

The Lockhart family, though not nearly so extensive nor complicated as the Boyd family, is quite large. It is generally agreed that the Lockhart family can be traced to one Symon Loccard in the 12th Century.

In his book, The Founding of the Family, Simon Macdonald Lockhart wrote:

"The history of Scotland abounds with the names of illustrious families who have taken part in the development of the country over the centuries. Campbell and Gordon; Graham and Stewart; Douglas and Scott; Highland Chief and Lowland Baron, the list is a long one and includes the names of many who still make their contribution to the well-being of the country. Some fought to free the country from English domination in the Wars of Scottish Independence, some sought power for themselves in the struggle between noble and King; some sided with the Old Church and some with the New Kirk in the religious wars which ended in the ousting of the Stuarts. Many won titles and vast estates for themselves and their descendants by their support of the King; others lost not only their lands but their heads as well by backing the wrong side. The Lockharts cannot be said to have produced a line of great statesmen or politicians. They won fame as lawyers mostly, though there was one famous diplomat and one member of Parliament who might have made a distinguished name for himself had he not been on the losing side. The family found a place for itself in the establishment of the country as it emerged. Whatever action there was the Lockharts were usually involved in it for weal or woe.

The name of Lockhart is derived from Locard, sometimes spelt Lokart. The modern spelling seems to have been introduced in the fifteenth century, and refers to the crusade on which Sir Symon Locard was the custodian of the key of the casket in which Bruce's heart was carried. Like so many Scottish families the Locards came from the South. They were among those who were dispossessed by William the Conqueror and sought refuge in Scotland. There were Locards at Levinton near Penrith in the twelfth century, and we next hear of them in Annandale in Dumfriesshire, where the town of Lockerbie is said to be named after them. But the family finally settled in Ayrshire and Lanarkshire, where they have held land for over seven hundred years."

One of the earliest Locards to be identified was one Stephanus, or Stephen, Locard. It is said that Stephanus founded the village of Stevenson in Ayrshire which is said to have been a hamlet or "ferm-toun" housing the farmers and workers on part of his estate. He also was the progenitor of the Ayrshire branch of the Stephenson family.

Symon Locard, son of Stephanus, acquired lands in Lanarkshire and commemorated his name by founding Symon's Toun or what is now called Symington. The same Symon Locard established a church there between 1154 and 1165. This church drew 'tiends' or tythes from a large area and eventually there was a dispute with the church. A compromise was reached when Locard agreed to surrender the church and all its revenues on the condition that he (Locard) would be assured that the incumbent, whom Locard had appointed, would continue in the office, holding it from the Abbey of Kelso during his lifetime.

In 1273, another Sir Symon Locard, son of Malcolm, seized the tiends of the parish and refused to account for them to the Abbey. The dispute ended when Sir Symon admitted he had no right to the "fruits of advarson of the Church" and bound himself and his heirs never to trouble the monks or their vicar.

Another reference to an early Locard which referred to a charter "... a charter dated 1323 by Sir Simon Locard bound himself and his heirs to pay out of the lands of Lee and Cartland ... to Sir William de Lyndesey, Rector ... of Air (Ayr) ten pounds sterling of annual rent..." This bond was confirmed by King Robert the Bruce. The latter is important because it establishes the association of Sir Symon Locard with Robert Bruce and tends to support a legend concerning the change of spelling of the name Locard to Lockhart.

George Fraser Black in Surnames of Scotland identified Symon Locard as filius Malcolm Locard. Another researcher has identified him as a son of Malcolm McHeth who is said to have been an illegitimate son of Alexander I (1077-1124). Black had also identified a charter by one Alan filius Walteri which was witnessed by a Symon Locard. (The latter is significant as it establishes the association of Boyds (Walter descended from the same source as Simon who was father of Robert the First Buidhe or Boyd).

According to Simon Macdonald Lockhart, in the Founding of the Family, which I cited earlier, "...there is some confusion over who actually acquired the lands of Lee; according to Douglas Baronage the Symon Lockhart mentioned above was the first to be referred to as 'of Lee'. However, Irving and Murray in "The Upper Ward of Lanarkshire" give this position to William, second son of Malcolm, and this theory has been adopted here. The exact date when the lands of Lee came in the family is not known but 1272 is traditionally accepted. We do know that in 1288 the lands of Lee were held from the Crown and paid a rent of 66 shillings; in 1289 the rent was five chalders of oatmeal and eighty shillings. Symon also owned the lands of Craiglockhart (now Craiglockhart) in Edinburgh. He was knighted by Alexander III."

The above has been cited in an effort to establish the identity of Sir Symon Locard who had journeyed toward the Holy Land with the heart of Robert the Bruce. Since Symon Locard lived at Lee as late as 1289 it is surmised that he, or his son, must have perpetrated the feat which caused the change of name to Lockhart.

While it is generally agreed that most all Lockharts do descend from a Symon Locard, there is a question as to when the spelling changed from Locard to Lockhart and also some doubt about the legend of the Heart of the Bruce. L. G. Pine in his The Story of Surnames states: "It may be stated in parenthesis that the Highland Clans and their chieftans cannot trace their ancestry to anything like the length of the Welsh tribes and the Irish chiefs. Few clans are traceable before the thirteenth century. Consequently, the surnames of the Highlands are not very old. It is argued that surnames were introduced into Scotland by Malcolm Conmare, and this is supposed to have taken place before the influence of his Queen Margaret came into question. He married her in 1068 and the convocation at which the innovation of surnames was proposed was held at Forfar, Angus in 1061. Among the surnames adopted, according to the old chronicler, were Calder, Lockhart, Gordon, Seton, Galloway, Lauder, Meldrum, Shaw, Gargill, Rattray, Dundas, Cockburn, Mar and Abercromby, Menzies and Leslies."

George Fraser Black in Surnames of Scotland alludes to the legend of the heart as a myth when he states: "The myth about an ancestor of the Lockharts securing the heart of Bruce which Douglas perilled in the fight with the Saracens in Spain led to the spelling of the name Lockhart, and in the alteration of the coat of arms either to perpetuate the belief, or as Nisbet says 'to make their arms more univocal to the name.'"

In The Black Douglas, the author states: "The body of Douglas and the heart of the Bruce were brought back to Scotland by one William Keith of Galston." The account of Douglas throwing the heart and its case before him in the battle is also questioned. Historians and chroniclers of events of the 14th Century, who were contemporary, in their accounts of the episode make no mention of the heart being thrown nor of Sir Symon Locard's part in returning the heart and the body of Douglas to Scotland. On p. 116 of the book cited above, the author states that Froissart, one of the foremost chroniclers of his day "... that lover of the dramatic utterance and the flamboyant gesture would not have failed to introduce such an episode into his chronicle had he known of it." Further, nothing is written about the exploits of Sir Symon Locard nor of the heart being thrown into the van in battle until the 15th Century.

Several poems have been written about the legend of the effort to take King Robert Bruce's heart to the Holy Land. A copy of such a poem has been included in the appendix. The substance of the story is that both Sir James Douglas and Sir Symon Locard had long been associated with Robert Bruce before his coronation. They had fought side by side with him at some of the major battles fought for the independence of Scotland and in support of his right to the throne. Prior to his death, King Robert I (Bruce) beseeched his good friend Douglas to take the heart of the king with him on a crusade to the Holy Land. It is said that Robert Bruce regretted not having taken part in the crusades himself. Subsequently, after the king's death in 1329, Douglas had the heart encased in a silver casket and carried it on a chain around his neck. Accompanied by Sir Symon Locard and about 100 other knights, Douglas started for the Holy Land. In Spain he joined the King of Castille in a fight with Saracens and in the battle Douglas was mortally wounded. Legend has it that Douglas thrust the casket before him and shouted "Go thou before me Robert as thou wast wont to do!" It is said that Locard retrieved the casket with the heart and brought it, along with the body of Douglas, back to Scotland. According to the legend, the heart and fetterlock were then added to the Locard family arms and the spelling of the name changed from Locard to Lockhart.

Another legend associated with the crusade has to do with the Lee Penny. The legend of the Lee Penny is said to have been the basis for Sir Walter Scott's The Talisman. I had not been able to get details of the legend of the penny until my sister, Elizabeth Devitt Anderson furnished this version:

"Symon Locard, whose native seat was Lee, accompanied the Good Lord Douglas on his expedition to the Holy Land with the heart of King Robert Bruce. Locard participated in wars against the Saracens and took as a prisoner a wealthy emir. The mother of the emir came to Locard to pay ransom for her son. The ransom was negotiated and as the mother opened her purse to pay the ransom a coin with a pebble in it dropped out. It seemed the mother was very agitated and searched frantically until she had recovered the item. Locard, shrewd and cunning as the Lockharts who descended from him, realized that the coin must have been of special value and he added that to the price of the ransom. The mother remonstrated but finally gave up the amulet. She explained that water in which the coin was dipped operated as a styptic to stop bleeding. It was also useful to reduce fever as well as possessing other properties as a medical talisman.

Sir Symon Locard found that it did indeed possess miraculous powers and he took the coin back to his own country and left it to his heirs who still refer to it as the Lee Penny from the name of the seat of the Lockharts at Lee. The Church of Scotland did not condemn it as with other sorcerous materials or amulets because they believed it pleased God to give healing virtues to the Lee Penny. Its powers are chiefly restricted to the cure of persons bitten by mad dogs. This illness sometimes arises from imagination and, in some cases, there is no reason to doubt that water poured on the Lee Penny effects a cure."

Elizabeth Casey, a fellow Lockhart researcher contributes the following:

"The history of the Lee Penny as described in Sir Walter Scott's Romance of the Talisman was: "...the Lee Penny was a sacred stone, said to have possessed great healing powers if used twelve times between each moon. The Lee Penny originally belonged to a tribe of Arabians called the Saldans. It was the Arab king (Saldan Arab King) at the time of Richard the Lion Hearted's crusade who fell in love with King Richard's woman "Joan of Sicisly" but because of his heathen religion was not allowed to marry her. But, on Joan's marriage to David, Earl of Huntingdon, who was a great friend of the Arabs, Saldan gave him the ancient Lee Penny. Note: David, Earl of Huntingdon, is said to have bequeathed the Lee Penny to Sir Simon Lockhart who was a distant nephew and the latter returned the penny to Lee which was the family seat. It should be pointed out here that Sir Walter Scott, author, was the father-in-law of Sir John Gibson Lockhart who was a descendant of Sir Symon Lockhart and many of the writings of Scott are said to pertain to the Lockhart family. Subsequently, Sir John Gibson Lockhart became Scott's chief biographer."

I inadvertantly skipped to the story of the Lee Penny prematurely as there is more which I think of special interest in connection with the episode of the heart. I came across the following and felt it especially interesting because of the language and spelling. As late as the 16th Century, William Edmonstoune in his "Lays of the Scottish Cavaliers" tells about Sir Simon of the Lee, yet to become famous in history, who was a certain close and loyal friend of Sir James Douglas. The story runs like this:

"Quehn Schi - James Douglas was chosin as maist worthy of all Scotland to pass with King Roberts hart to the Holy Land, he put in ane cais of gold with arromitike and precious unyementis; and tuke with him Schir William Sinclaire and Schir Robert Logan, with mony othir noblemen to the holy graif; ..." So wrote one Victor Boice; but the pilgrimage was doomed to failure.

Douglas, who in the long English wars had seen seventy battles, stopped on his way to the Holy Land to help Alonzo, King of Leon and Castille, at war with the Moorish governor of Grenada, who at the head of the Saracens had invaded Spain.

It was a fatal move, and Douglas was slain in the midst of battle. As he went down, he took from his neck the 'cais of gold' containing the embalmed heart of King Robert and cast it before him toward their destination; exclaiming in a loud voice: "Now pass onward as thou were won't, and Douglas will follow thee or die!"

The boyd and the locket were recovered by the surviving warriors and to a close friend - Sir Simon of Lee - fell the honor of becoming the custodian of the locket. Both the body of Douglas and the locket were returned to Scottish soil, and upon the family of Sir Simon was bestowed the right to the effigy of the Hart within a Fetterlock, and to bear ever after the name Lockhart."

The significance of the fetterlock being added to the arms is not understood. The dictionary defines fetterlock as being a lock of hair. As Nisbet has said, according to George Fraser Black, it may have been to make the arms more univocal to the name.

The Brus is said to have been written by a John Barbour (1320-1395) and is believed to have been written in 1375. I have not found a copy of The Brus and don't know if it is about the heart incident or if it mentions Symon Locard. Since Barbour lived during the time of the legend of the heart, if he mentioned Sir Symon Locard as having taken part that would be a good basis of support for the truth of the legend and would indicate that Froissart just overlooked the story. On the other hand, if Keith of Galston is mentioned as having returned the heart to Scotland that would tend to disprove the contention that the name Lockhart was derived in that way. Of course, we still would have to reconcile that with the convocation at Forgar, Angus in 1061 where the surname Lockhart was said to have been adopted in 1061 or almost three hundred years before the death of Robert Bruce!

As a matter of historic interest, it should be pointed out that some tales erroneously imply that Robert Bruce was killed in the battle in Spain. However, history records that while Douglas and Locard had accompanied Bruce in many battles, notably that at Bannockburn (June 1314), the king died in his castle at Cardross on 7 June 1329 probably of leprosy.

A curious aspect of the "heart" is the matter of absolution for mutilation of the body. Prior to his death, Robert had asked Douglas to convey his heart to the Holy Land. One version is that he wanted his heart buried in the holy sepulcher there. The other version is that Robert just wanted to take part in a crusade and expected his heart to be returned to Scotland. Whatever his intent, he had not sought papal dispensation for the necessary mutilation of his body. Moray (a Regent or Chancellor) later sought the dispensation.

It seemed questionable that the body of Douglas could be transported the long distance back to Scotland but that was explained in The Black Douglas, p. 165: "The bones of Douglas, the flesh of them boiled off in obedience to the grim sentimentality that decreed burial in his own land, were brought home to Scotland, with Bruce's heart, by William Keith of Galston. They lie in Douglasdale in the Church of St. Bride." Note: No mention of Sir Symon Locard!

There were other noted Lockharts from the time of the name change to the time the emigration to Ireland and later. There were literary figures, noted clergy, members of parliament, military leaders, jurists, etc. The family seat is still maintained by lineal descendants of Symon Locard. Whether we descend from Symon Locard of Lee has not been substantiated but the best guess is that we are his descendants. However, those who migrated to Ulster and eventually to the United States and elsewhere must have been the "poor relations" as were there counterparts the Boyds.

CHAPTER VII. LOCKHARTS OF DONEGAL

I had been told almost immediately on my arrival in the Loughros Point area that the Lockharts of Drumaghy (or Drimaha) were different Lockharts - that is, they were of a different family than those of Loughros Point. With the legend of the three brothers in mind, I guessed that probably those at Loughros Point descended from one of the three brothers and those at Drumaghy descended from a second of the three brothers. I had learned that "Far Enough" the place at which the third brother is said to have remained with his mother was near Ramelton and that there were still Lockharts in that area. I assumed that those of the Ramelton area must be descendants of the third brother. With that in mind, I decided that I could probably put all the Lockharts of Donegal into one of the three categories.

When I visited with Oliver B. Lockhart at Drumaghy, he told me that two brothers had operated adjoining farms there but one finally sold his holdings and moved out to "the point". Apparently that was the Lockhart who established Bayview Farm at Drimmitten. Time was short and my visit to Drumaghy was devoted on my part to trying to learn something of my great grandmother Ann Haslam who was born in nearby Kinnoughty and my great grandfather John Devitt who was born fairly close at a place called Shanaghan. Of course, much time was devoted to my effort to tell Oliver how I fit into the picture and in telling him of the people I knew in the United States. I came away with little knowledge of the Boyds and Lockharts and have learned since that Oliver is well versed in the history of the Boyds and Lockharts of the area. I came home with very little knowledge of the Lockharts. There were so many homes and people to visit that I had little time to ask the questions I had hoped would put me squarely on the road to finding out all about my Lockhart ancestors in Ireland!

I had always understood that the Boyds and Lockharts had arrived in Ireland to take part in the plantation of Ulster. However, there was a question raised about that when I learned that the ancestral home of my branch of the Lockharts at Bayview Farm was situated on lands which had been in the hands of the Lockhart family for almost 400 years. That, of course, would predate the plantation. Some planters had come early in the effort to establish other plantations but it was my understanding that they were mostly of English origin. Some others had also come with Cromwell and been granted lands in payment of their service to the crown. However, nothing of record has been found to support the length of time the farm has been in the hands of the Lockharts and it has been determined that the land on which they lived had been part of the Plantation of Ulster. Also, patent to those lands had been granted to a John Murray who must have been a predecessor of the H. G. Murray-Stewart to whom the Boyds and the Lockharts were paying rent as late as 1857.

The oldest Lockhart I can identify by name was one Alexander Lockhart¹ who was my great great grandfather. I began numbering generations with him. From the age of my grandmother, allowing 25-30 years per generation, I think my great grandfather must have been born c. 1825 and that great great grandfather Alexander Lockhart¹ must have been born c. 1800. If that is correct, then it seems there must have been six or eight generations of Lockharts residing in Drimmitten between 1610 and 1800 who preceded my great great grandfather as "owner" of what is now called Bayview Farm. It follows then that, if there were Lockhart brothers farming side by side at Drumaghy before the establishment of the Lockhart farm at Drimmitten, then there must be as many missing generations of Lockharts of that group at Drumaghy up to the time of Oliver Baskin Lockhart⁵'s great great grandfather who probably was William Lockhart¹. It is understandable that we are identified as "different Lockharts" but it is fairly conclusive that some four hundred years or so ago we probably descended from the same progenitors.

The age of the present house at Bayview Farm is not known but it apparently was the birthplace of my great great grandfather Alexander Lockhart¹ who was born c. 1800 and since it is believed that he was born there, the house must be almost 200 years old or perhaps more. It seems to be in excellent repair and quite pretentious when compared to the one story cottages around it. The house is two stories and has quite a few rooms. Of course, it is modernized and now has "indoor" plumbing! Comparison of a picture taken in 1926 and one I took in 1979 reveals very little change in the external appearance of the house except for a walled-in front garden and the absence of a huge hay stack. The present owner is Alexander Shaw Lockhart⁵, who is the same generation as me, and a son of a George Edwin Lockhart⁴ who had owned the farm before him. George Edwin Lockhart⁴ was a son of yet another Alexander Lockhart³ who was a brother of my grandmother Annie Lockhart³. Alexander Lockhart³ remained on the "home place" while most of the other children left the area. Alexander Lockhart³ was a son of Alexander Lockhart² and the latter had a brother William Lockhart² and it is thought that the original farm owned by their father Alexander Lockhart¹ was divided between them. During the approximate 200 year gap from the time of the plantation until arrival of Alexander Lockhart¹, there must have been as many as six or seven generations of owners of the farm and it would be a pretty safe guess that some of those bore the given name Alexander also!

At the time of my great grandfather Alexander Lockhart² and his brother William Lockhart² the farms were adjoining and leads to speculation that they were originally one farm. Alexander Lockhart² was married to a Susanna Boyd² and William Lockhart was married to a Mary McClintock². Both Alexander and William are said to have died in their mid-forties. After the death of William, Susanna Boyd Lockhart² bought what is called "Mary's Farm" from widow Mary McClintock Lockhart². Subsequently, Susanna Boyd Lockhart² bought another small acreage and it is believed the present farm is roughly 60 acres in area with part of the farm in an area called Cloghboy. Incidentally, Mary McClintock Lockhart² migrated to United States and lived in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania with most of her children except for a son who remained in Ireland. Elsewhere, I have mentioned the problem of determining to what extent the land was "owned"! My grandmother Annie Lockhart³ and her sibs had been born at Bayview Farm in the 1850s and according to Griffith's Valuation of Tenements of 1857, the lands on which the Boyds and Lockharts lived were listed as having been leased to one H. G. Murray-Stewart and the Boyds and Lockharts were listed as occupiers of the land. Under what was called Tenant's Rights apparently the occupiers acquired rights in the properties which were saleable such as buildings erected, improvements made, etc. Also, in the 1850s it is said Land Division started and the landlords sold out small acreages to their tenants. If anything was owned at Bayview Farm at the time, it must have been the Tenant's rights. On a second trip to Ireland the end of this year, one of my priorities will be to try to determine just who owns what.

In the 1857 valuation cited above, the lands where the Boyds and Lockharts lived were identified. A group of men: Robert Boyde, Hugh Boyde, Cormick Henry, Patrick White, Alexander Boyde, John Boyd, Thomas Boyde Jr., Alexander Boyde and Thomas Boyde were listed as occupiers of a tract of 272 acres. Another tract consisting of 97 acres was listed as occupied by a group consisting of: Patrick White, Alexander Lockhart, William Lockhart, Robert Boyde, Thomas Boyde, Alexander Walker, and James Walker. Yet another tract of 95 acres was listed as occupied by: Richard Boyde, James Walker and James Boyde. A fourth tract was listed as consisting of 81 acres and the occupants were: Phelim Minelis, William McConnell, Thomas Boyde, and William Given. Also, the Wesleyan Schoolhouse was listed as exempted from the valuations. At Kilcashel, Alexander Morough and Hamilton Blane were listed as occupiers of tracts of 66 and 57 acres respectively.

Alexander Lockhart² and Susanna Boyd² were parents of ten children including my grandmother Annie Lockhart Devitt³. As in other cases, a family outline or "tree" depicts the descent from this couple to the most recent generations. Probably the best known of the ten children was Hugh Lockhart³ who is still referred to as the "Master" as he taught at the Wesleyan School for about fifty years and was succeeded by Margaret Acheson Finney⁴ who was the wife of George Edwin Lockhart⁴. The school house had been built on land of Bayview Farm and only recently the title to the building was given to the present owner of the farm.

Earlier, I mentioned that Alexander and William Lockhart² were brothers who had apparently divided the original Lockhart farm. I had not known of any other brothers or sisters until I recently came across information that a Susan Lockhart² had married a Hugh Boyd² of Laccaduff which is another small townland at "the point". Since there were no other Lockharts at "the point" it seems likely that Susan must have been a sister of Alexander and William Lockhart². Possibly other siblings will come to light! This adds another dimension as Hugh Boyd² and Susan Lockhart² were another set of great grandparents to Alexander Shaw Lockhart⁵ the present owner of Bayview Farm.

Mary McClintock², widow of William Lockhart², lived in the Lawrenceville section of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. I knew of this family, occasionally some of the members would visit at the home of my grandmother, with whom my family lived, and they attended the Boyd and Lockhart reunions which were held in Schenley Park, Pittsburgh, but I was never aware of any relationship between those Lockharts and "ours". However, since they were associated with the other Boyd and Lockhart families I guessed they, too, must have come from Donegal and must be included in what I would write. I had thought that if they were not related to "our" Lockharts, they might be related to the Lockharts of Drimaha (Drumaghy) or possibly they might be the link to the third brother. On a visit to a relative, Roberta Burnett, I was given a copy of an obituary which she had found in her mother's bible. It pertained to the death of Alexander Lockhart³ of the Lawrenceville Lockharts and I guessed it must have special significance if it had been kept in the family bible of one of "our" Lockharts!

The notice said that Alexander Lockhart³ was 89 yrs. of age at the time of his death in 1934, described him as a retiree from the Penna. Railroad and listed his survivors. They were: Mrs. George Harris, Mrs Fred Leinemann and Mrs. Bert Strawn who were his daughters; and two sons: John and Charles Lockhart⁴; four brothers: Aaron of Ireland, Frank of Rapid City, S.D., and John and James Lockhart³ also of Pittsburgh. Interment was listed at Allegheny Cemetery where most all of the Boyds and Lockharts of Pittsburgh were buried.

With the clues in the obituary, I tried unsuccessfully to contact the survivors. A friend contacted the cemetery and sent a copy of the people buried in the family plot including the names of some Boyds but that proved to be of no help to me. My prospects of locating descendants of Alexander Lockhart³ of Lawrenceville were not good but I remembered an older brother telling me that a famous racing driver, Frank Lockhart - a relative - was killed in an accident at Daytona Beach, Florida. I did get data on that Frank Lockhart but he was not associated with the Frank Lockhart who was listed as a survivor in the obituary. Some time later, I chanced the letter to the librarian at Rapid City, S.D. in hope of getting an address and was obliged with information that Frank Lockhart had lived on Dark Canyon Road. I addressed a letter to a Lockhart on Dark Canyon Road and was gratified when I received a letter from Frank's son James who put me in touch with others of the family. I have not achieved a complete family tree but did learn quite a lot about the family. Little by little, pieces of the puzzle came together, with the result that William Lockhart², father of the Lawrenceville Lockharts had been a brother of my great grandfather Alexander Lockhart² and the children of Mary McClintock Lockhart of Lawrenceville were all first cousins of my grandmother Annie Lockhart³.

I can write in greater detail about the descendants of Alexander Lockhart² as, through living in the same house with my grandparents, her brothers and sisters were frequent visitors and all lived within a very short distance of where I was born, and I knew all and their families personally. While the data pertaining to the descendants of those who remained in Ireland was sketchy at first, my visit to Ireland helped me to get an understanding of who was who among those descendants. Of course, some of the emigrants to Pittsburgh were children of those families and I knew them personally also. In addition, the annual reunion of the Boyds and Lockharts was attended regularly by our family and I was aware of the various generations as they emerged.

I propose to begin here with an account of a little of what I know of the ten children of Alexander Lockhart² and Susanna Boyd² of Drimmitten, Loughros Point, Donegal:

Alexander Lockhart³ married Mary Jane Boyd³ (daughter of Hugh Boyd² and the Susan Lockhart² who I believe was a sister of my great grandfather). They lived at Bayview Farm and were parents of ten children also. Their son George Edwin Lockhart⁴ inherited Bayview Farm and it is their son Alexander Shaw Lockhart⁵ who is the present owner of the farm.

Hugh Lockhart³ had married a Jane Boyd⁴ of The Rosses and they lived at Drimmitten where Master Hugh Lockhart³ taught at the Wesleyan School. He was succeeded in the position by Margaret Acheson Finney⁴ who was spouse of George Edwin Lockhart⁴ in the preceding paragraph.

Richard Lockhart³ migrated first to Pittsburgh where he lived for a while at my grandmother's home but later moved to Ontario (Toronto) Canada where he raised his family. I have not been able to learn much about his descendants except for a few names of his children and their spouses.

Thomas Lockhart³ was well known to me. He was, of course, my father's uncle but everyone seemed to call him Uncle Tom and his wife was known as Aunt Beck. She had been from the Boyd family at Laccaduff which I identify as Devitt's Cottage Boyds. Her father had bought Devitt's Cottage from my great grandfather John Devitt². Uncle Tom was associated with the Diamond Bank in Pittsburgh and was father of Alexander Lockhart⁴ who married a woman named Elizabeth (surname unknown) and a son Thomas Lockhart⁴ who died unmarried as a youth.

John Lockhart³ was affectionately called "Uncle Johnny" by all and his wife was Mary Staples³. They lived in back of the house where I lived and our backyards almost adjoined. Uncle Johnny was father of three daughters: Myrtle, Marion, and Emily Lockhart⁴. Uncle Johnny made a career as a motorman and conductor with the old Pittsburgh Street Railways Co.

William Lockhart³, one of those who remained in Ireland, made his home at Laccaduff. He had married an Isabella Boyd⁴ and they were parents of a large family which included William George Lockhart⁴. William George Lockhart⁴ was a big, hearty, gruff fellow and well known to all of the Boyds and Lockharts both here in the United States as well as in Ireland. His sons participated with him in the contracting business and some of them branched out to start their own construction firms.

Susanna Lockhart³ was called Aunt Annie. That is a puzzle as my grandmother's name was Annie and she was called Aunt Annie also by her nieces and nephews. Aunt Annie (Susanna) married Alexander Brown³ and they, too, lived in Pittsburgh. They were parents of several children (sons) but only a daughter Ruth Annabelle Brown survived. Ruth Annabelle Brown⁴ married Noah Howard Phillippi⁴.

Jane Lockhart³ married Hugh Wilson³ and they also lived in Pittsburgh where Uncle Hugh prospered in the real estate business and was especially successful in the land boom in Florida. I was very much impressed with Uncle Hugh who was quite affluent and I particularly remember his visit to our home and his big Chandler limousine with its jump seats and cut glass flower vases! I remember my pride when sitting in his big car and I guess I thought the association improved my status! The Wilsons had several children. I have been successful in locating only one and getting a smattering of information about the others. The Wilson children were Ruth Annabelle who married a John Houserman; Mabel who married a man named Bartel and sons Charleton and Lockhart Wilson⁴. The Houser-mans had two sons and Mabel Wilson Bartel was mother of a Wilson Bartel⁵ but I have no further data about them.

Isabella Lockhart³ was the sister who remained in Ireland. She had married a William Given and they were parents of Alec Given⁴, Maude, Eunice and Thomas Given⁴. Other Givens have been intermarried with the Boyds and Lockharts but I have not been able to associate these with other relatives but likely they are related.

Annie Lockhart³ was my grandmother and, of course, I knew her best of all. She had married John Devitt³ who was also from the same small area near Ardara, Donegal. Soon after their marriage, they migrated to Pittsburgh, Pa. in 1873. Enroute to the United States, grandma was pregnant with the first of her four children. Aunt Annie Lockhart Devitt⁴ was born on 1 January 1874 so it seems my grandparents Devitt were enroute during the last nine months of 1873 but I have found no shipping record. My grandparents lived in the same ward of the city all of their lives after migrating from Donegal although it originally was called the 13th and later the 5th Ward. Pittsburgh and old Allegheny City had merged and it was necessary to renumber the wards. That merger had taken place about 1906 and caused me unbelievable problems when I tried to trace them through census records and could not find them listed in the 5th Ward for the early years. Once I discovered the problem, I was able to trace their movements from address to address in the city.

The Devitts first lived toward the center of downtown Pittsburgh which is known as the Golden Triangle and the area where they first lived is the site of the present Civic Arena. All of the Boyds and Lockharts lived close to each other and, as time went on, they seemed to follow each other farther out from city center and toward the top of Herron Hill. As the "lower hill" which had been the mecca to which they migrated initially became a place of run down homes and places of ill-repute they moved toward an area called Schenley Heights where they all attended the Schenley Heights Methodist Church.

The final residence of the senior Devitts was at 3374 Webster Avenue in the house where I was born. I suppose it was before the time my parents made their home there but the house on Webster Avenue attracted many of the emigrants from Donegal. I spent days reviewing the old directories and was astounded at the number of Boyds and Lockharts who at one time gave the house on Webster Avenue as their address. Of course, they stayed only long enough to get established and out on their own. In the end, the more affluent moved from the "hill" to the suburbs but the Devitts remained in their home there.

Ann and John Devitt³ were parents of two sons and two daughters. One of the sons, Johnnie Devitt, died in infancy and the other was my father Alexander Lockhart Devitt⁴. The daughters were Annie Lockhart Devitt⁴ and Susanna Ruth Devitt⁴. My mother was Rebecca Moore⁴ from a little town called Drumeason near Creeslough. Annie Lockhart Devitt⁴ married a George Boyd⁴ from The Rosses. Susanna Ruth Devitt⁴ married Simpson Hamilton⁴.

I am tempted to write about all of the families in detail, and especially about our immediate family, but I will exercise some restraint and just tell a little of grandma and grandpa. My recollection of grandma is that she was a very tiny, stern disciplinarian, who drew her hair tight across her scalp and fastened it in a "bun" at the back of her head. She was exceedingly devout and exceedingly frugal. She was a very loveable person in spite of my description of her but a decided contrast to my grandfather. She seemed to be very reserved while he was outgoing and of very good humor. She dominated poor grandpa and had her way in most everything except getting him to church. I don't know if he ever went with her but she seemed to go to church day and night! I was more than a little surprised when I learned that they had been married in the Church of Ireland rather than the Methodist Church which was the faith she espoused. Grandpa's good humor might have stemmed from an early interest in spirits (alcoholic that is) and there is an entry in grandma's bible where she was able to get him to "take the pledge". I never knew him to drink alcoholic beverages but, in spite of that, he was a lot of fun and quite a bit different from grandma! He took delight in telling tall tales, some of which grandma refuted. One of his favourite stories was about his courtship of grandma. He said that her family disapproved of him and she was forbidden to see him, probably because he belonged to the Church of Ireland. One of grandma's chores was to gather the fowl in the evening and put them in their coops where they would be safeguarded from the foxes. On occasion, in order to have some time with grandpa, she would tie a chicken or duck to a bush and when her mother enquired if all the fowl were safely cooped up she would explain that they were all accounted for "except for Biddy, the auld duck". Her mother would order her out of the house and admonish her not to come back until the missing fowl was found. Of course, grandma could have her tryst and then find the lost fowl and go home. Grandma's response was always Tsh! Tsh! John! There's not a word of truth in it! Those stories usually were told when an old crony called Old Tom Boyd stopped to visit. Grandma always saved the parlour and entertained in the dining room - except of course when the Ladies Aid Society met at her house. There was a mantle with a gas fireplace backed by an asbestos sheet which glowed red from the heat and reflected it into the room. The room was carpeted with fine Brussels carpet and many evenings we children basked in the comforting warmth of the fire place watching the flames curl on the fibres of the asbestos backing and the flickering of the blue tongues of fire. We would be lulled to sleep listening to the soft Irish brogues and wake in the morning to find ourselves in our own beds. My first recollection of radio evokes another fond memory of grandpa. My sister was being courted by my brother-in-law to be when he became interested in radio which was then in its infancy. He made a crystal set which he brought over to our house. Of course, everyone had a turn with the headset. At grandpa's turn to listen, he was so enchanted with the music that he began to dance a jig in spite of the short wire by which he was tethered to the radio! Another memory recalls his first experience with a safety razor. I had always been fascinated by the ritual of shaving with an old straight razor--the preparation of the boiling water, stropping the razor, making the lather in the old mug, applying the lather with the old hog bristle brush and then the precarious scraping. It was during such a ceremony that my older brother John appeared with his newly purchased safety razor and urged grandpa to try it. After that one experience, grandpa got out his old deep leather purse with the twisters on top and gave John money to buy another razor as he would keep that one for himself. He never again shaved with a straight razor but my father would not shave with a safety razor! I could go on and on but I guess I will have to call a halt at some point! However, I do want to explain that grandpa was a city employee and for years he drove a team of beautiful draft horses which pulled an old "dump" wagon. For those who don't know what a "dump" wagon is, it had a split hinged bottom. When it was to be unloaded, the driver pulled a lever which unlatched the two halves of the bottom and the weight of the load pushed the halves apart and allowed the load to drop out. The wagons were high enough to permit the wagon to be hauled away. During his tenure as a teamster, grandpa took part in the "removal of the Grant Street hump" which was an historical event in city history and he also hauled the huge blocks of stone which line the Herron Hill reservoir. As the years went by, he was relegated to duties in the old city stables on Magee Street and finally ended his tenure with the City as Stable Boss where not only the fine draft horses were stabled but also the Pittsburgh Police Department's famous Black Horse Patrol. It was during this period that I had an especially close and delightful association with grandpa. His day began about 3:00 A.M. when he had a leisurely breakfast, rested a few minutes on the old leather covered fainting couch in the kitchen and then set off by street car for the stables. He had a driving horse named "Danny" at his disposal and a nice driving buggy and frequently would drive home for lunch. To my delight, he would often take me back to the stables with him and I would spend my time trying to catch the young pigeons which nested in the eaves. Of course, the experience of riding the old street cars on the trip home was relished but the chief delight was just being exclusively in the company of grandpa! He usually got home about 3:30 P.M., had a nap before dinner and usually would be in bed before 8:00 P.M. or 8:30 P.M.

I had mentioned that grandma was very frugal and I guess that really is an understatement. Often their meal consisted of stewed squabs, caught at the stables, and accompanied by boiled potatoes, or salty mackerel and potatoes. No doubt the frugality paid off for them as they were able to amass quite a bit of money considering the menial work experience. They had taken in boarders, bought a second house which they rented out, and finally when the telephone came along they sold the second house and bought American Telephone & Telegraph stock. Grandpa died in 1928 and grandma survived him by almost ten years when she died in 1937. They lived long lives and must have thrived on the squabs and salty mackerel! However, I do recall that grandpa had a special fondness for Cheese Tidbits which were sold in little boxes for a nickel. Grandpa could not resist when we had a box and would eat so many he would get out the old leather purse and fish for a nickel so that we could get another box. Well, so much for nostalgia! While others may have become bored with the foregoing I must say that I felt this would give my progeny pleasure and beg the indulgence of other readers.

Now, I must tell what little I know of the Lockharts of Drumaghy (Drimaha) who I thought originally might have been of Branch II of the Lockharts. The counterpart of my great great grandfather in this group I believe was another William Lockhart¹. The oldest Lockhart I have definitely identified in this group is William Lockhart² who married Catherine Baskin². From the little I know of the early family, it seems that William Lockhart² had a brother Oliver Lockhart², a sister who married a man named Henry of Aighan, Bruckless, and another sister who married a man named Cassidy from Inver. There is also believed to have been another sister.

If, as Oliver Baskin Lockhart⁵ has pointed out, the Lockharts of Drimmitten had originally had a farm beside that of the Lockharts at Drumaghy (Drimaha) and then moved out to Drimmitten, and the Lockhart farm at Drimmitten has been in the hands of that Lockhart family for almost 400 years then it seems that the ancestral home of the Drumaghy Lockharts must also be almost 400 years old. As with the Drimmitten Lockharts, it is assumed also that prior to William Lockhart¹ there must have been six or seven generations of Lockharts between him and those who established the Lockhart farm at Drumaghy.

The farm at Drumaghy is presently owned by Oliver Baskin Lockhart⁵ who resides there with his wife Annie Jane Young⁵ and it is operated as a dairy farm. They have no children and I wonder if the farm will continue in the hands of a Lockhart?

William Lockhart² and Catherine Baskin² were parents of five children:

Oliver Baskin Lockhart ³	m. Margaret Whittecombe ³
Thomas Lockhart ³	m. Sarah Judge ³
Ann Lockhart ³	m. William Adair ³
Margaret Lockhart ³	m. Andrew Colvin ³
Isabella Lockhart ³	m. James Gallagher ³

Unfortunately, my visit with Oliver Baskin Lockhart⁵ was all too short. He is very knowledgeable about all the Boyds and Lockharts and most all of the old families of the area. I did not have time to question him about the family in general but did learn a little about his immediate family. Much of my time with Oliver was taken up with my effort to learn more about my great grandmother Anne Haslam² who was from a nearby town of Kinnoughty. Oliver knew of the family and he was my first ray of hope in the effort to get started on that part of my family history. Also, Anne Haslam's husband John Devitt was ~~also~~ from Shanaghan which is a nearby town.

Oliver Baskin Lockhart⁵ of Drumaghy is a son of Andrew Lockhart⁴ and Catherine Baskin⁴. Incidentally, so far as is known the latter was not related to the Catherine Baskin² who was the spouse of William Lockhart². Oliver Baskin Lockhart⁵ was named for his grandfather Oliver Baskin Lockhart³ who had married

Margaret Whittecombe³. Margaret Whittecombe³ was a daughter of a member of the Coast Guard at Inver. I will not go into detail as to how I came across the data but eventually it was learned that the following were the children of Oliver Baskin Lockhart³ and Margaret Whittecombe³:

Isabella Lockhart ⁴	m. Alex. Boyd Lockhart ⁴
Frances Lockhart ⁴	m. Charles Clifton ⁴
Andrew Lockhart ⁴	m. Catherine Baskin ⁴
Sarah Ann Lockhart ⁴	m. William Post ⁴
William Thomas Lockhart ⁴	m. Bella Gamble ⁴
Catherine Lockhart ⁴	m. Samuel Long ⁴
Oliver Lockhart ⁴	m. Sarah Beattie ⁴
Joseph Lockhart ⁴	m. Sarah Jane Gormley ⁴
Lillie Lockhart ⁴	m. Thomas Tarr ⁴
Samuel Lockhart ⁴	m. Elizabeth Mc Clure ⁴

Descendants of the above are listed in the Chapters pertaining to "trees" and biographical data.

Of the five children of William Lockhart² and Catherine Baskin², the above were by far the most easily traced. I almost despaired of learning anything about the other families but in the end I had acquired some knowledge of all of them except the descendants of Isabella Lockhart³ and James Gallagher³ and felt I would have to bring this work to an end with no reference to the descendants of that couple. Finally, some of the information came to me and I may be able, before this is published^{to}, include at least some of the descendants of this couple.

My search for descendants of Oliver Baskin Lockhart³ led me to Oliver Joseph Lockhart⁵ of Denver, Colorado who is a son of Joseph Lockhart⁴ and Sarah Jane Gormley⁴. It was that Oliver Lockhart⁵ who told me of a Lockhart family who had a farm at Englewood, Colorado. They visited with his family on occasion but he was not sure of the relationship. A genealogist at the Denver Library furnished copies of census tracts which enabled me to get started on the family of Thomas Lockhart³ and Sarah Judge³. In time, that search took me to Pueblo, Colorado where I learned that their daughter Catherine Jane Lockhart⁴ was the spouse of a Samuel McBride⁴. I was surprised that the librarian seemed to be familiar with Samuel McBride⁴ and asked if she might be related to him but she said no but she had knowledge of him because he had been mentioned in a book Hippocrasy in a Red Vest: The Story of a Country Doctor, an autobiography by Dr. Michael Beshoar. Dr. Beshoar had, on June 1, 1868, established Pueblo's first newspaper, The Colorado Chieftan, and put Samuel McBride of Golden, Colorado in charge. Later, Samuel McBride bought the paper and operated it for a while. He was influential in the community and later became head of the school board. As treasurer of the school board, it is alleged that he had absconded with a considerable sum of money which had been allocated for the building of a new school. Apparently he did not own the paper at the time as it is said the headline read: "Has Anybody Seen Sam?" This is not intended as a reflection on Sam nor his family but simply reported as a matter of historic interest. It is no secret and the story is apparently well known. The librarian also produced an obituary of Catherine Jane Lockhart McBride⁴ which listed her surviving children. Through City Directories, I was able to get some names and addresses to write to and one such letter put me in touch with Barbara Sabo⁵ who was a grand daughter of Catherine Jane Lockhart⁴ and Samuel McBride⁴. I acquired a little information about the family of Thomas Lockhart³ and had hoped to get much more and complete that family "tree" but unfortunately the data has not come to hand. I since have written to another person who might provide more details but can't delay completion of this in hope of getting more data and if it does arrive it probably will be reserved for use in a possible supplement. Recently, I acquired a news clipping pertaining to the 50th Wedding Anniversary of Samuel McBride⁴ and Catherine Jane Lockhart⁴. In a biographical sketch of Mr. McBride he was credited with having been influential in the development of the railroads but no mention was made of his involvement with the newspaper nor of his caper as treasurer of the school board! According to the news item, he had lived out his life at a place called The Swallows near Pueblo. It had been reported that he fled to Florida with the school funds and that he had contacted friends, admitted taking the money, and said he had no intention of returning. It seems his friends who had put up bond for him were required to make good at great personal sacrifice. It certainly would be interesting to learn how he returned to Colorado, whether he made restitution, or ever came to trial. I hope that through my more recent contact the rest of the story of Samuel McBride⁴ will come to light.

Ann Lockhart³ married a William Adair³ and there were eleven children born of this marriage. Their names and those of their descendants will be found in the "trees" and biographical chapters. The surname Adair is common among the Boyds and Lockharts as is true of the Deans and Colvins. One particular Dean family can be traced back to Ann Lockhart³ and spouse. Annie Dean who married Rev. Welsh Sproull Boyd⁴ of Pittsburgh, Pa. was her descendant. Welsh Sproull Boyd's father was Hugh Lockhart Boyd³ and I had great difficulty in associating him with the other Boyd relatives. Finally, I determined that he was a son of the Susan Lockhart² who I discovered must have been a sister of my great grandfather Alexander Lockhart² and therefore, Hugh Lockhart Boyd³ and his brother William L. Boyd³ were first cousins of my grandmother Annie Lockhart Devitt³. For those who might want to pursue this further, John Boyd³ who had married Kate Colvin⁴ and Mary Jane Boyd³ who had married Alexander Lockhart³, were also children of Susan Lockhart² and her spouse Hugh Boyd² of Laccaduff.

Margaret Lockhart³ had married Andrew Colvin³ and they were parents of Kate Colvin⁴. There were seven children in this Colvin family including James, Sarah and Richard Colvin⁴ who migrated to the Philadelphia area of Pennsylvania. A daughter of Richard Colvin, Barbara Colvin⁵, lives at Alden, Pa. and is well acquainted with Samuel Lockhart⁵ of the Drumaghy Lockharts who also lives in that city. The reader will find the progeny of Margaret Lockhart³ in the lists of trees.

Isabella Lockhart³ who had married James Gallagher³ is the last of the five children of William Lockhart² and Catherine Baskin² of Drumaghy to be accounted for. I had known the names of two of their children: a Margaret Gallagher⁴ is said to have married Michael C. Deane and a Catherine Gallagher⁴ had married a James Richardson. I did not know of other children. However, in The History of the Parish of Ardara, Patrick J. McGill had devoted a section to noted clergymen of the parish and had asked Oliver Baskin Lockhart⁵ to write about the Protestant clergymen. The following was written pertaining to Reverend Thomas Gallagher:

"Son of James Gallagher and Isobel Lockhart, he was born in Tullycleave about 1875 in the same house where Fr. Luke Boyle first saw the light, over three score years later. James Gallagher died young and some years later, his widow and family emigrated to America. Young Thomas found employment as an unskilled labourer, but he had higher ambitions. He still continued his studies which had started so well at the Back Road Methodist School, in Ardara. Eventually, in addition to helping his mother, he had saved sufficient money to enable him to attend a college conducted by the Methodist Episcopal Church. After ordination, he ministered in the Boston area. He visited Ireland on a few occasions in the early decades of this century, and stayed with his nephew, the late Willie Ritchie, who was also a cousin of Father Ritchie, mentioned in a recent article."

Much of the information I had about the Gallaghers initially had come to me through the help of a fellow researcher, Marge Carlson of Woburn, Massachusetts. Mrs. Carlson is related to many of "our" people who have married into "her" families in the area of Ardara. One such example is the James Richardson⁴ who married Catherine Gallagher⁴. It was Mrs. Carlson who came across a memorial to the Reverend Thomas Gallagher which appeared in the Journal of the (Methodist) Conference at Louisville, Kentucky of 1955. Among his survivors mentioned in the article was a Dr. Virginia Willis of Fort Worth, Texas. Diligent researcher that she is, Mrs. Carlson checked the phone directory for Fort Worth and was able to send me an address for Dr. Willis. I wrote to Dr. Willis M.D. and she replied with confirmation that she was, indeed, a descendant of James Galla-gher³ and Isabella Lockhart³. Dr. Willis also provided the name of James Richardson (son of James Richardson and Catherine Gallagher) and his address. She suggested that I write to Mr. Richardson as he is said to have compiled some family trees. I have not had a response from him as yet but will look forward to what he can contribute.

The foregoing is a scanty review of the material which has been gathered about the Lockharts of Donegal. I cannot emphasize too strongly that this is not meant to be a complete record of all the Lockharts of Donegal. No doubt there are many Lockharts of the area who are not accounted for here but I feel that all those surely must be descended from one of the three brothers who migrated from Ayrshire or Lanarkshire in Scotland and probably arrived in Ireland at the time of the Plantation of Ulster, or shortly thereafter.

CHAPTER VIII. BIOGRAPHIC DATA BY ALPHABETICAL GROUPING

The content of this chapter is intended to provide more data on individuals than could be included in the family outlines. Because of the limitations of space, it was not possible to include all of the data presented here along with the outlines.

Even with this chapter devoted to the biographical information, it has been restricted in content. Originally I had intended to include the names of several sets of grandparents and, though I have the information in many cases, I decided not to include that data.

It was difficult to decide the categories of information. Whether I had the data for the various categories or not, I provided space for the data to be entered in the future. I hope that many readers will have the data needed to fill the gaps and that the material may some day be put together in a supplement or made available to others who choose to write about our families.

Following the same scheme used throughout, there are eighteen alphabetical groups. Each group is headed by an individual who I thought might be better known or more readily identified.

As in all cases, the data for a child follows that of his parent and the data for the grandchildren follows after the children throughout the entire line of descent.

CHAPTER IX. FAMILY OUTLINES BY ALPHABETICAL GROUPS

In this chapter, the reader will find outlines of the families which show the line of descent from the head of the group to the most recent generation. Of course, more is known of some families than others. In some cases, the forebears of the "heads" of groups are given but the decision was made to select a head of a group who might be more easily identified than his/her parents. Without this precaution, many groups would be headed by people with the same given and surnames.

In most cases, the generation number of an individual was known and presented no problem. However, in some cases, the generation number of an individual might be different from one group to another. In general, though, the reader will find that the generation numbers are consistent. As pointed out earlier, in cases where the parents were of different generations, a choice had to be made about the generation of their children. The writer chose to try to assign a generation number to an individual which would be more compatible with those of his peers. In some cases, the reader will find a child listed as being of the same generation as that of one of his parents.

Aside from the above confusion, it is hoped that the outlines will be easy to follow. They are in the usual outline form with Roman and Arabic numbers, upper and lower case letters, combinations, etc.

The same system has been used in these outlines as in the other chapters with data pertaining to a descendant followed by his children and then grandchildren and great grandchildren before going back to begin again with the line of descent from a sibling.

NOTE: GROUP "I"³ IS HEADED BY MARY JANE BOYD³ WHO HAD MARRIED ALEXANDER LOCKHART³. IN ADDITION TO HER FAMILY, THE DATA FOR HER SIBBLINGS KNOWN AT THE TIME WERE INCLUDED IN HER GROUP. SUBSEQUENTLY, IT WAS LEARNED THAT ALL DESCEND FROM HUGH BOYD² WHO HEADS GROUP "Q". THE TWO GROUPS SHOULD BE COMBINED BUT SINCE IT WOULD BE A HORRENDOUS JOB TO CHANGE THINGS OVER IT WAS DECIDED BEST TO CONTINUE WITH THE TWO GROUPS. ALTHOUGH THEY ARE ALL OF THE SAME FAMILY, SOME WILL BEAR ID NUMBERS RELATING TO GROUP "I" AND OTHERS WILL RELATE TO GROUP "Q".

The following table shows the results of the experiment. The first column is the number of trials, the second column is the number of correct responses, and the third column is the percentage of correct responses.

Number of Trials	Number of Correct Responses	Percentage of Correct Responses
10	7	70%
20	14	70%
30	21	70%
40	28	70%
50	35	70%
60	42	70%
70	49	70%
80	56	70%
90	63	70%
100	70	70%

As can be seen from the table, the percentage of correct responses is constant at 70% for all numbers of trials. This suggests that the subject is performing at a level of 70% accuracy.

CHAPTER X. ALPHABETICAL INDEX AND IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS

This chapter consists of an alphabetical index of the people included in this study and it is hoped that none have been overlooked. Opposite the name of an individual, the reader will find the identification numbers which pertain to that person. Some people have only one number while others may have as many as eight because they are listed on that many family trees. In some cases, an individual may be listed more than once on the same family tree.

The identification number set opposite a persons name will not direct the reader to a particular place on a family tree but the first digit will lead to the proper group and if there is more than one person of the same name on a given tree the generation number will help to decide which of the persons is of special interest to the reader. In the case of frequently used names such as Hugh Boyd the reader will have to identify other people of that same family in order to fit the Hugh Boyd of their interest into a specific family.

CHAPTER XI. INDEX OF IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS BY GROUPS

This chapter contains a list of identification numbers listed under their group heading. For example, under the heading "A" the reader will find all the ID numbers for the various generations from first through the most current generation in that group and opposite the number will be the name of the individual assigned that number. Of what value that might be to the reader, I don't really know. However, I kept such lists and as each new person came to my attention I referred to the lists and assigned the next number in his generation within that group. It may be helpful to those of you who wish to add names to the various groups and can use the same scheme of identification numbers. I know that there are many descendants for whom I have no information and those who use the next available numbers will only be able to use the new ID numbers which they assign for their use as they will not be kept current and others might assign those same ID numbers to people they add to the trees. However, I hope that information will come to me and that I can keep an accurate record of the numbers as they are assigned. As I have mentioned before, whether it is to me or some other person, the data should be forwarded to a central repository where it can be coordinated. Of course, the best way to keep the material accurate is to form a family history society and a group, sharing the work, can keep the history up to date.

Historiography

This Coat of Arms was officially recorded in ancient heraldic archives. Its design is the only one of its kind in existence. The written heraldic description is worded in the language developed by the heralds as it appears in the records. The first use of a Coat of Arms was for identification on the battlefield. Many times deeds of valor were recorded with a memorable symbol. The fact of the recording of a Coat of Arms means its bearer's surname had its origin at least as far back as medieval times. As not everyone was granted a Coat of Arms, it also means the family name was singled out ages ago to be lifted from conformity and personal extinction. As many people of the same name are unrelated, we have not traced anyone's individual family tree to obtain the information in this report. It should be remembered, however, that many people may be direct descendants of a particular bloodline and be unknown to each other. Although bearers of this old and distinguished family name comprise a small fraction of the population, a surprising number of them have gained world-wide recognition. Space here permits only the listing of a scant few of its famous members, they include:

According to Black's "Surnames of Scotland", Lockhard comes from the old French (variant spelling is Locard).

SYMON LOCKHART (Locard) (c. 1153) It is recorded in Black's "Surnames of Scotland" that he witnessed the grant of a church of Wicestun, now Wiston, and its two chapels to the Abbey of Kaleso.

JORDAN LOCKHART (Locard) According to Black's "Surnames of Scotland", he witnessed an obligation by Duncanus de Carric (1225).

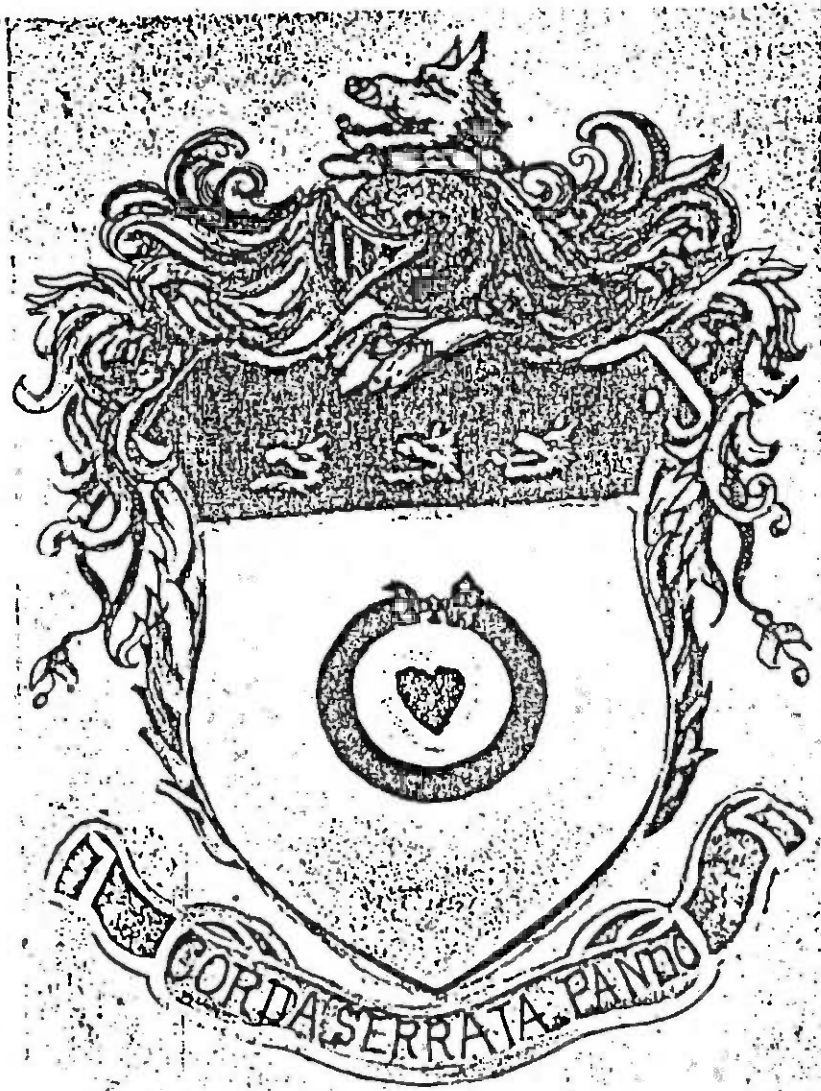

SIR GEORGE LOCKHART (d. 1689) President of the Court of Sessions.

JOHN GIBSON LOCKHART (1794-1854) Scottish editor and writer. He enjoys a high reputation in English letters. His biography of his father-in-law, Sir Walter Scott (1837-38), ranked among the great biographies in the Scottish language.

As is evident, this family name is a very old and distinguished one. The above is but a mere hint of its illustrious history.

APPENDIX IX

DESCENT OF THE OLD AND ANCIENT FAMILY OF BOYDS IN SCOTLAND

The following account has been copied and condensed from the "History of the Boyd Family and its Descendants" by William P. Boyd, 1912, with the permission of his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Emily L. Boyd of Genesco, New York, which information has not been verified by the compiler.

THOME, a descendant of King Kenneth III.

FLEANCE, his son and successor.

ALAN, his son and successor.

Died in 1153.

He was created First Lord High Stewart.

MARRIED Margaret, daughter of Tergus (or Fergus), Earl of Galloway.

FIVE CHILDREN:

(1) No records.

(2) Walter

From whom the royal family of Stewarts descended.

(3) SIMON, his successor.

From whom the noble family of Boyds descended.

(4) No records.

(5) Adam

He was mentioned in a charter given by David I, in the year 1139.

SIMON, his son.

He was created Second Lord High Stewart of Scotland.

His name is found in the foundation charter of the Monastery of Paisley dated 1161, and he is designated "Simon frater," "Walter filis," "Alan Lapiferi" and "Regis Sectiac." This Monastery is supposed to have been the first original house of the Boyds of Scotland, 1157, and supposed to have been in the possession of Walter Fitzalan, ancestor of the royal Stewarts.

He had a number of children, ROBERT being the eldest.

ROBERT BOYD (1st), his eldest son (Robert, the Fair).

Died prior to 1240.

Being of fair complexion he was named "Boyt" or "Boyd" taken from the Gaelic or Celtic word "Boidt" or "Boidel" and from this fact the first surname "Boyd" arose, and from him the families of the "Boyds" in the Old World descended.

He is designated nephew of Alan, First Lord High Stewart, and in a contract between Bryce de Eglinton and the village of Irvin in 1205, he is designated "Dominus Robertus Boyd" and at that time and since then, the Boyds have carried the armorial bearings of the Stewarts and prove their descent from that illustrious house.

NOTE: ROBERT is designated here as the first in this Boyd line and his son, ROBERT as the second, etc.

SIR ROBERT BOYD (2nd), son of Robert (1st).

Died about 1270.

The first history we have of him is in a charter given Sir John Erskin in 1262. He was designated in the same as "Robertus de Boyd Miles" and he was also called Robert II of Scotland.

SIR ROBERT BOYD (3rd), son of Sir Robert (2nd).

Died about 1300.

SIR ROBERT BOYD (4th), son of Sir Robert (3rd).

Died about 1329.

He was a supporter of Robert Bruce and continued so until the independence of Scotland was established, June 23, 1314, by the decisive Battle of Bannockburn, and for his loyal services he was rewarded by Bruce with gifts of land of Kilmarnock, Bondington and Hertschaw. The lands of Kilbyrd and Ardnell, or Portincross, situated in the parish of west Kilbride, were conferred upon him about 1308, and from his younger son, Thomas, the Boyds of Portincross descend. These lands remained in that family until 1737.

THREE SONS:

(1) THOMAS BOYD, his successor.

(2) Allen Boyd
Died 1339.

(3) James Boyd
He was mentioned in charter of 1342.

SIR THOMAS BOYD (5th), son of Sir Robert (4th).THREE SONS:

(1) THOMAS BOYD, his successor.

(2) William Boyd
He is an ancestor of the Boyds of Badenheath.

(3) Robert de Boyd
He MARRIED a lady named Grizel and was the ancestor of the Boyds of Portincross in Ayrshire. (1375-76.)

SIR THOMAS BOYD (6th), son of Sir Thomas (5th).

He was known and designated "Dominus de Kilmarnock."

(The first Lord Boyd.)

MARRIED a daughter of Sir John Gifford, Lord of Yester by whom he acquired a great fortune.

His son, THOMAS, his successor.

SIR THOMAS BOYD (7th), son of Sir Thomas (6th).

Died July, 1432.

He was the second Lord of Kilmarnock.

He was active in the time of King James I of Scotland.

MARRIED Johanna Montgomery of Androsson.

TWO SONS:

(1) THOMAS BOYD, his successor.

(2) William Boyd
He was Abbot of Kilwinning.

SIR THOMAS BOYD (8th), son of Sir Thomas (7th).

He was killed in battle July 9, 1439, by Alexander Stewart.

FOUR CHILDREN:

(1) ROBERT BOYD, his successor.

(2) Alexander Boyd
Lived at Duncan, Scotland, and was executed in 1469.

(3) Janet Boyd
MARRIED John Alexander Maxwell of Calderwood.

(4) Margaret Boyd
MARRIED Lord Alexander Montgomery. 850

SIR ROBERT BOYD (9th), son of Sir Thomas (8th).

Died 1470.

He was made Lord of Parliament in 1459 by King James II of Scotland. Later he was Lord Justiciary of Scotland, and also in 1464 and 1465 he was ambassador to England.

MARRIED a daughter of Sir Robert Maxwell of Calderwood.

SIR ROBERT BOYD (9th) was accused, along with his brother, Alexander, of having carried the young King James III (then eight years of age) from Linlithgow to Edinburgh, "to enter upon the regal government, while he was yet in his minority." Parliament and King James II himself declared the Boyds were innocent of all crimes and such a decree was registered among Acts of Parliament. However, the many favors bestowed upon ROBERT by James II caused jealousies among the nobles who planned to overthrow him. This was finally accomplished, and ROBERT and Alexander, his brother, were sentenced to be executed and lands confiscated. Alexander was executed on Castle Hill in Edinburgh in 1469. ROBERT, who had fled to England when he learned of the intention to ruin him, was not executed but died in Alnwick, England, in 1470, of a broken heart over the fate of his family.

FOUR CHILDREN:

(1) THOMAS BOYD, his successor.

(2) Alexander Boyd

He carried on the lineal descent of the family after the death of his nephew.

(3) Archibald Boyd

He was an ancestor of the Boyds of Bousham of Scotland.

(4) Elizabeth Boyd

MARRIED Archibald, the fifth Earl of Angus.

SIR THOMAS BOYD (10th), son of Sir Robert (9th).

Died 1471, in Antwerp, Flanders, and a tomb to his memory bearing "honorable inscription" was erected by his friend, Charles, Duke of Burgundy.

MARRIED Margaret (or Mary) Stewart, King James' eldest sister. By this union SIR THOMAS obtained considerable wealth, and was created the Earl of Arran.

Margaret was to have been given by her mother in marriage to Edward, Prince of Wales.

Apparently her marriage to THOMAS (10th) incurred the displeasure of her brother, King James, as he had her placed in confinement in Dean Castle during the life of her husband, Thomas (10th), to whom she was devoted, and the marriage declared null and void.

After the death of THOMAS (10th), his wife was released and she was married (it is thought by compulsion) to Lord Hamilton, to whom the Earldom of Arran was then given.

(See page 15)

TWO CHILDREN:

(1) JAMES BOYD, his successor.

(2) Margaret Boyd

MARRIED first to Lord Forbes. MARRIED second to Earl Cassillis.

There were no children.

JAMES BOYD (11th), son of Sir Thomas (10th).

He was slain in 1484 in some petty feud while yet a young man and his possessions were returned to the Crown.

Several years after death of his father the Lordship of Boyds was restored to him by a charter from King James III in 1483 and comprehended the lands of Kilmarnock, Daloy, Nodsdale, Monsford, Muir, Rawensdale, Ralson, Flatc and other lands in the county of Ayr.

He had no children.

ALEXANDER BOYD (12th), son of Sir Robert (9th).

As JAMES (11th) died leaving no descendants, ALEXANDER, his uncle, the brother of his father, being next in line of lineal descendants, the estate of JAMES (11th) was soon afterwards conferred upon him by King James IV, who became his friend. In 1505 he was constituted Baillie and Chamberlin of Kilmarnock. MARRIED the daughter of Sir Robert Colville of Ochiltree, Scotland.

THREE SONS:

- (1) ROBERT BOYD, his successor.
- (2) Thomas Boyd
He was an ancestor of the Boyds of Pitcon.
- (3) Adam Boyd
He was an ancestor of the Boyds of Pentville and Flushing.

ROBERT BOYD (13th), son of Alexander (12th),

Died 1550.

He had the estate and honors of Lord Boyd restored to him in 1536, by King James V, and for bravery shown in the Battle of Glasgow Field, which was fought about 1543, he was awarded additional honors and was succeeding heir to James Boyd, son of the Earl of Arran in 1544.

MARRIED to Helen Somerville, daughter of Sir John Somerville of Cornnathon.

TWO CHILDREN:

- (1) ROBERT BOYD, his successor.
- (2) Margaret Boyd
MARRIED to Neil Montgomery of Landsham.

ROBERT BOYD (14th), son of Robert (13th).

Born 1517. Died Jan. 3. 1589.

An epitaph to his memory, engraved on a stone is still to be seen in the Low Church of Kilmarnock.

He was known as the fourth Lord Boyd, and was an ardent supporter of Mary, Queen of Scots, who was beheaded Feb. 8., 1587, after nearly twenty years imprisonment in England.

His eldest son, THOMAS, his successor.

THOMAS BOYD (15th), son of Robert (14th).

Died 1619.

He was known as the fifth Lord Boyd, and obtained a charter to many lands and baronies between 1595 and 1599.

MARRIED Margaret, a daughter of Sir Matthew Campbell of Loudoun, Scotland.

SEVEN CHILDREN:

- (1) ROBERT MARTIN BOYD, his heir.
- (2) Sir Thomas Boyd of Bedbay.
- (3) Adam Boyd
MARRIED Margaret, sister of Robert Galbreath of Kilbraith.
- (4) Daughter (name unknown).
MARRIED the Earl of Abercome.
- (5) Daughter (name unknown).
MARRIED Blair of Blair.
- (6) Daughter (name unknown).
MARRIED Elphington of Blaythswood.
- (7) John Boyd

ROBERT MARTIN BOYD (16th), son of Thomas (15th).

Died too young to succeed his father and become the sixth Lord Boyd.

MARRIED to Jane, daughter of the Earl of Lothian.

Son, ROBERT, succeeded Thomas (15th).

ROBERT BOYD (17th), son of Robert Martin (16th).

He was the sixth Lord Boyd and in 1620 and 1626 he obtained a charter to several lands in Ayrshire.

MARRIED first the daughter of the Master of Eglinton.

There were no children.

MARRIED second the daughter of the Earl of Addington who had great sympathy with the persecuted Presbyterians.

FIVE CHILDREN:

(1) JAMES BOYD, his successor

(2) Daughter (name unknown)
MARRIED Morrison of Preston Grange.

(3) Daughter (name unknown)
MARRIED Sinclair of Stevenson.

(4) Daughter (name unknown)
MARRIED Scott of Harden.

(5) Daughter (name unknown)
MARRIED Dundas of Armstrong.

JAMES BOYD (18th), son of Robert (17th).

He was the eighth Lord Boyd.

He was fined £1500 by Cromwell, for supporting Charles.

It was during the life of this Lord Boyd that the part of Dean Castle, on which the Kilmarnock Arms are sculptured, was erected.

(See page 15)

MARRIED to Catherine Craik (Crayk) who died in 1654.

One son, WILLIAM, his successor.

WILLIAM BOYD (19th), son of James (18th).

Died 1692.

King Charles II created him First Earl of Kilmarnock on Aug. 7, 1661.

In 1672, a second charter conferred upon him and the town further rights and privileges.

His eldest son, WILLIAM, his successor.

WILLIAM (20th), son of William (19th).

He was created second Earl of Kilmarnock.

TWO SONS:

WILLIAM, the eldest son and his successor.

WILLIAM BOYD (21st) son of William (20th).

Died 1717.

He was the third Earl of Kilmarnock, becoming heir to his father in 1699.

He was attached to the House of Hanover. When George I was proclaimed, Aug., 1714, he appeared with the Baillies and other gentlemen at the Council House ceremony. This was in the time of Rob Roy, and the reckless clan of the McGregors.

His eldest son, WILLIAM, his successor.

WILLIAM BOYD (22nd) son of William (21st).

Died Aug. 18, 1746.

He was the fourth Earl of Kilmarnock. When he succeeded to his father's estate it was very much reduced.

MARRIED to Lady Annic Livingston, daughter and heiress of the Earl of Linlithgow and Callander.

He was the last of the Boyds who lived at Dean Castle.

In 1745, Prince Charles (known as the Young Pretender, the last of the Stewart dynasty to be recognized) planted his standard in Scotland and succeeded in gaining the attachment and support of many of the nobles and gentlemen of influence. William became one of Prince Charles' adherents. He was appointed colonel of the Hussars by Prince Charles and accompanied the insurgents to England. The Duke of Cumberland arrived from Scotland to suppress the Rebellion and on Apr. 16, 1746, at Drummossie Moor, near Culloden House, a short distance from Inverness, vanquished the army of Prince Charles. William, the fourth Earl of Kilmarnock, among others, was taken prisoner to London Tower and brought to trial July 28, 1746, in Westminster Hall. The Lord High Stewart and one hundred thirty-six peers were present. William Boyd, who was a tall and slender person of dignity, stood up and pleaded guilty, and recommended himself to the mercy of the King. He was executed Aug. 18, 1746, after all pleas and petitions in his behalf had been rejected. Interment was made at his own request close by the side of Marquis of Tullibardine in the Church of St. Peters, London. Inscription on his coffin: "Guilielmus, Comes de Kilmarnock, Decollatus, 18 Augusti 1746, Aetat Suae 42." His wife, Annie, died of grief Sept. 16, 1747, at Kilmarnock.

THREE SONS:

(1) Robert Boyd, the Earl of Errol.

He was called Lord Boyd.

By a trust deed dated 1732, and confirmed by the House of Peers. in 1752, he recovered the land of Kilmarnock, forfeited by his father, and this was sold afterwards to the Earl of Glencairn. Upon the death of his great-aunt, the Countess of Errol in her own right, he succeeded to the title of Errol in 1758. The sale of the title of his forefathers closed the last title of the Boyds of Scotland. This had been handed down from one generation to another for nearly eight hundred years. He then took up his residence at Slains Castle, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, situated upon the sea coast.

(2) Charles Boyd

He took up the spirit of the rebellion with his father, and was also engaged in the same Battle of Drummossie with his father. Soon after the fight he fled to the Island of Arran, the ancient property of the Boyds, where he concealed himself for a year. He then went to France and married a French lady and resided there for about twenty years, when a pardon was granted to all the rebels, and he returned again to his native country and resided with his brother in Aberdeenshire.

(3) William Boyd

He was in the Royal Navy and was promoted in 1761 to a company of the Fourteenth Infantry. Being close to the time of the Revolutionary War he may have been sent to America with his regiment. Some Boyd families today connect their lineage to him, or to a Boyd of that name, who settled in the middle or eastern States.

The present Earl of Errol, known as Hays, is the direct descendant of the Boyd family in the lineal line. In the Peerage of the United Kingdom, he is called Baron Kilmarnock of Kilmarnock.

APPENDIX X

THE HEART OF THE BRUCE

It was upon an April morn,
While yet the frost lay hoar,
We heard Lord James's bugle-horn
Sound by the rocky shore.

Then down we went, a hundred knights,
All in our dark array,
And flung our armor in the ships
That rode within the bay.

We spoke not as the shore grew less,
But gazed in silence back,
Where the long billows swept away
The foam behind our track.

And aye the purple hues decayed
Upon the fading hill,
And but one heart in all that ship
Was tranquil, cold, and still.

The good Lord Douglas paced the deck,
And oh, his face was wan
Unlike the flush it used to wear
When in the battle-van.

"Come hither, come hither, my trusty knight,
Sir Simon of the Lee:
There is a freit lies near my soul
I fain would tell to thee.

"Thou know'st the words King Robert spoke
Upon his dying day:
How he bade me take his noble heart
And carry it far away;

"And lay it in the holy soil
Where once the Savior trod,
Since he might not bear the blessed Cross,
Nor strike one blow for God.

"Last night as in my bed I lay,
I dream'd a dreary dream:—
Methought I saw a Pilgrim stand
In the moonlight's quivering beam.

"His robe was of the azure dye,
Snow-white his scatter'd hairs,
And even such a cross he bore
As good Saint Andrew bears.

"Why go ye forth, Lord James,' he said,
'With spear and belted brand?
Why do you take its dearest pledge
From this our Scottish land?

"The sultry breeze of Galilee
Creeps through its groves of palm,
The olives on the Holy Mount
Stand glittering in the calm.

"But 'tis not there that Scotland's heart
Shall rest by God's decree,
Till the great angel calls the dead
To rise from earth and seal

"Lord James of Douglas, mark my rede!
That heart shall pass once more
In fiery fight against the foe,
As it was wont of yore.

"And it shall pass beneath the Cross,
And save King Robert's vow;
But other hands shall bear it back,
Not, James of Douglas, thou!

"Now, by thy knightly faith, I pray,
Sir Simon of the Lee—
For truer friend had never man
Than thou has been to me—

"If ne'er upon the Holy Land
'Tis mine in life to tread,
Bear thou to Scotland's kindly earth
The relics of her dead."

The tear was in Sir Simon's eye
As he wrung the warrior's hand—
"Betide me weal, betide me wo,
I'll hold by thy command.

"But if in battle-front, Lord James,
'Tis ours once more to ride,
Nor force of man, nor craft of fiend,
Shall cleave me from thy side!"

And aye we sailed and aye we sailed,
Across the weary sea,
Until one morn the coast of Spain
Rose grimly on our lee.

And as we rounded to the port,
Beneath the watch-tower's wall,
We heard the clash of the atabals,
And the trumpet's wavering call.

"Why sounds yon Eastern music here
So wantonly and long?
And whose the crowd of armed men
That round yon standard throng!"

"The Moors have come from Africa
To spoil and waste and slay,
And King Alonzo of Castile
Must fight with them today."

"Now shame it were," cried good Lord James,
"Shall never be said of me,
That I and mine have turned aside
From the Cross in jeopardy!

"Have down, have down, my merry men all—
Have down unto the plain;
We'll let the Scottish Lion loose
Within the fields of Spain!"

"Now welcome to me, noble lord,
Thou and thy stalwart power;
Dear is the sight of a Christian knight,
Who comes in such an hour!

"Is it for bond or faith you come,
Or yet for golden fee?
Or bring ye France's lilies here,
Or the flower of Burgundy!

"God greet thee well, thou vallant king,
Thee and thy belted peers—
Sir James of Douglas am I called,
And these are Scottish spears.

"We do not fight for bond or plight
Nor yet for golden fee:
But for the sake of our blessed Lord,
Who died upon the tree.

"We bring our great King Robert's heart
Across the weltering wave
To lay it in the holy soil
Hard by the Savior's grave.

"True pilgrims we, by land or sea,
Where danger bars the way;
And therefore are we here, Lord King,
To ride with thee this day!"

The King has bent his stately head,
And the tears were in his eyne—
"God's blessing on thee, noble knight,
For this brave thought of thine!

"I know thy name full well, Lord James;
And honored may I be,
That those who fought beside the Bruce
Should fight this day for me!

"Take thou the leading of the van,
And charge the Moors again;
There is not such a lance as thine
In all the host of Spain!"

The Douglas turned towards us then,
Oh but his glance was high—
"There is not one of all my men
But is as bold as I.

"There is not one of all my knights
But bears as true a spear—
Then onwards, Scottish gentlemen,
And think King Robert's here!"

The trumpets blew, the cross-bolts flew,
The arrows flashed like flame,
As spur in side, and spear in rest,
Against the foe we came.

And many a bearded Saracen
Went down, both horse and man;
For through their ranks we rode like corn,
So furiously we ran!

But in behind our path they closed,
Though fain to let us through
For they were forty thousand men,
And we were wondrous few.

We might not see a lance's length,
So dense was their array,
But the long fell sweep of the Scottish blade
Still held them hard at bay.

"Make in! make in!" Lord Douglas cried—
"Make in, my brethren dear!
Sir William of Saint Clair is down;
We may not leave him here!"

But thicker, thicker grew the swarm,
And sharper shot the rain,
And the horses reared amid the press,
But they would not charge again.

"Now Jesu help thee," said Lord James,
"Thou kind and true St. Clair!
An' if I may not bring thee off,
I'll die beside thee there!"

Then in his stirrups up he stood,
So lion-like and bold,
And held the precious heart aloft
All in its case of gold.

He flung it from him, far ahead,
And never spake he more,
But—"Pass thee first, thou dauntless heart,
As thou wert wont of yore."

The roar of fight rose fiercer yet,
And heavier still the stour,
Till the spears of Spain came shivering in,
And swept away the Moor.

"Now praised be God, the day is won!
They fly o'er flood and fell—
Why dost thou draw the rein so hard,
Good knight, that fought so well?"

"Oh, ride ye on, Lord King!" he said,
"And leave the dead to me,
For I must keep the drearlest watch
That ever I shall dreel

"There lies, above his master's heart,
The Douglas, stark and grim;
And wo is me I should be here,
Not side by side with him!

"The world grows cold, my arm is old,
And thin my lyart hair,
And all that I loved best on earth
Is stretched before me there.

"O Bothwell banks! that bloom so bright
Beneath the sun of May,
The heaviest cloud that ever blew
Is bound for you this day.

"And Scotland! thou may'st veil thy head
In sorrow and in pain:
The sorest stroke upon thy brow
Hath fallen this day in Spain!

"We'll bear them back unto our ship,
We'll bear them o'er the sea,
And lay them in the hallowed earth,
Within our own countrie.

"And be thou strong of heart, Lord King,
For this I tell thee sure,
The sod that drank the Douglas' blood
Shall never bear the Moor!"

The King he lighted from his horse,
He flung his brand away,
And took the Douglas by the hand,
So stately as he lay.

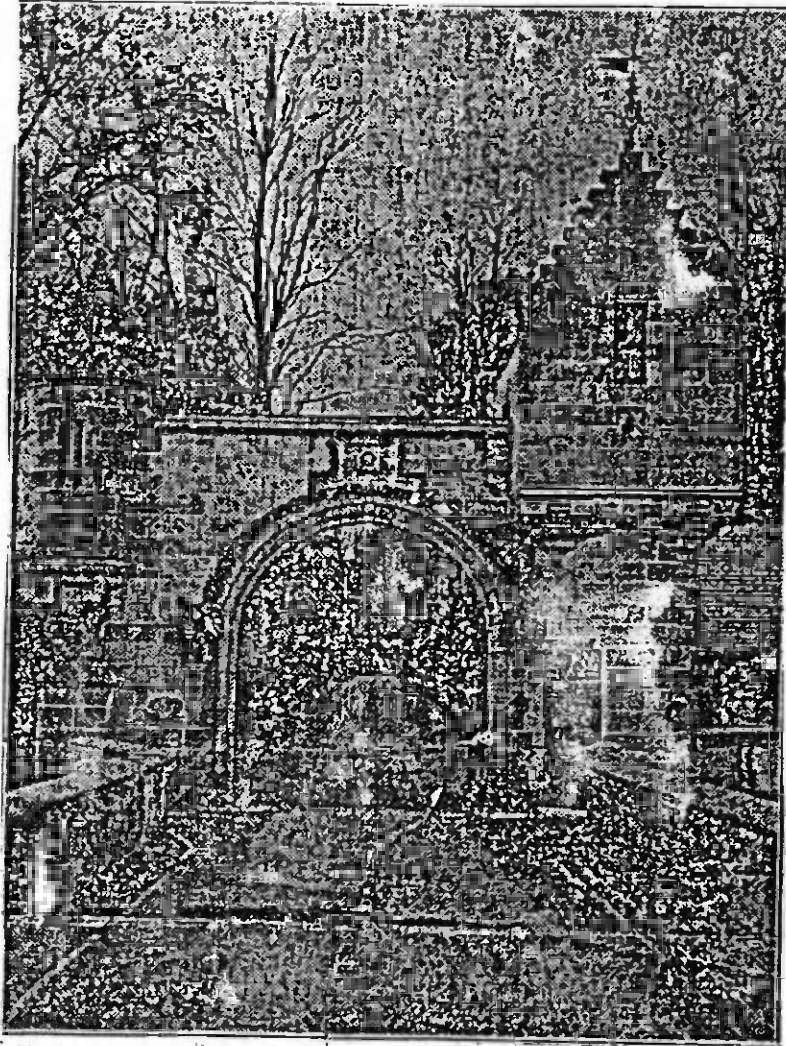

"God give thee rest, thou valiant soull
That fought so well for Spain;
I'd rather half my land were gone,
So thou wert here again!"

We bore the good Lord James away,
And the priceless heart we bore,
And heavily we steered our ship
Towards the Scottish shore.

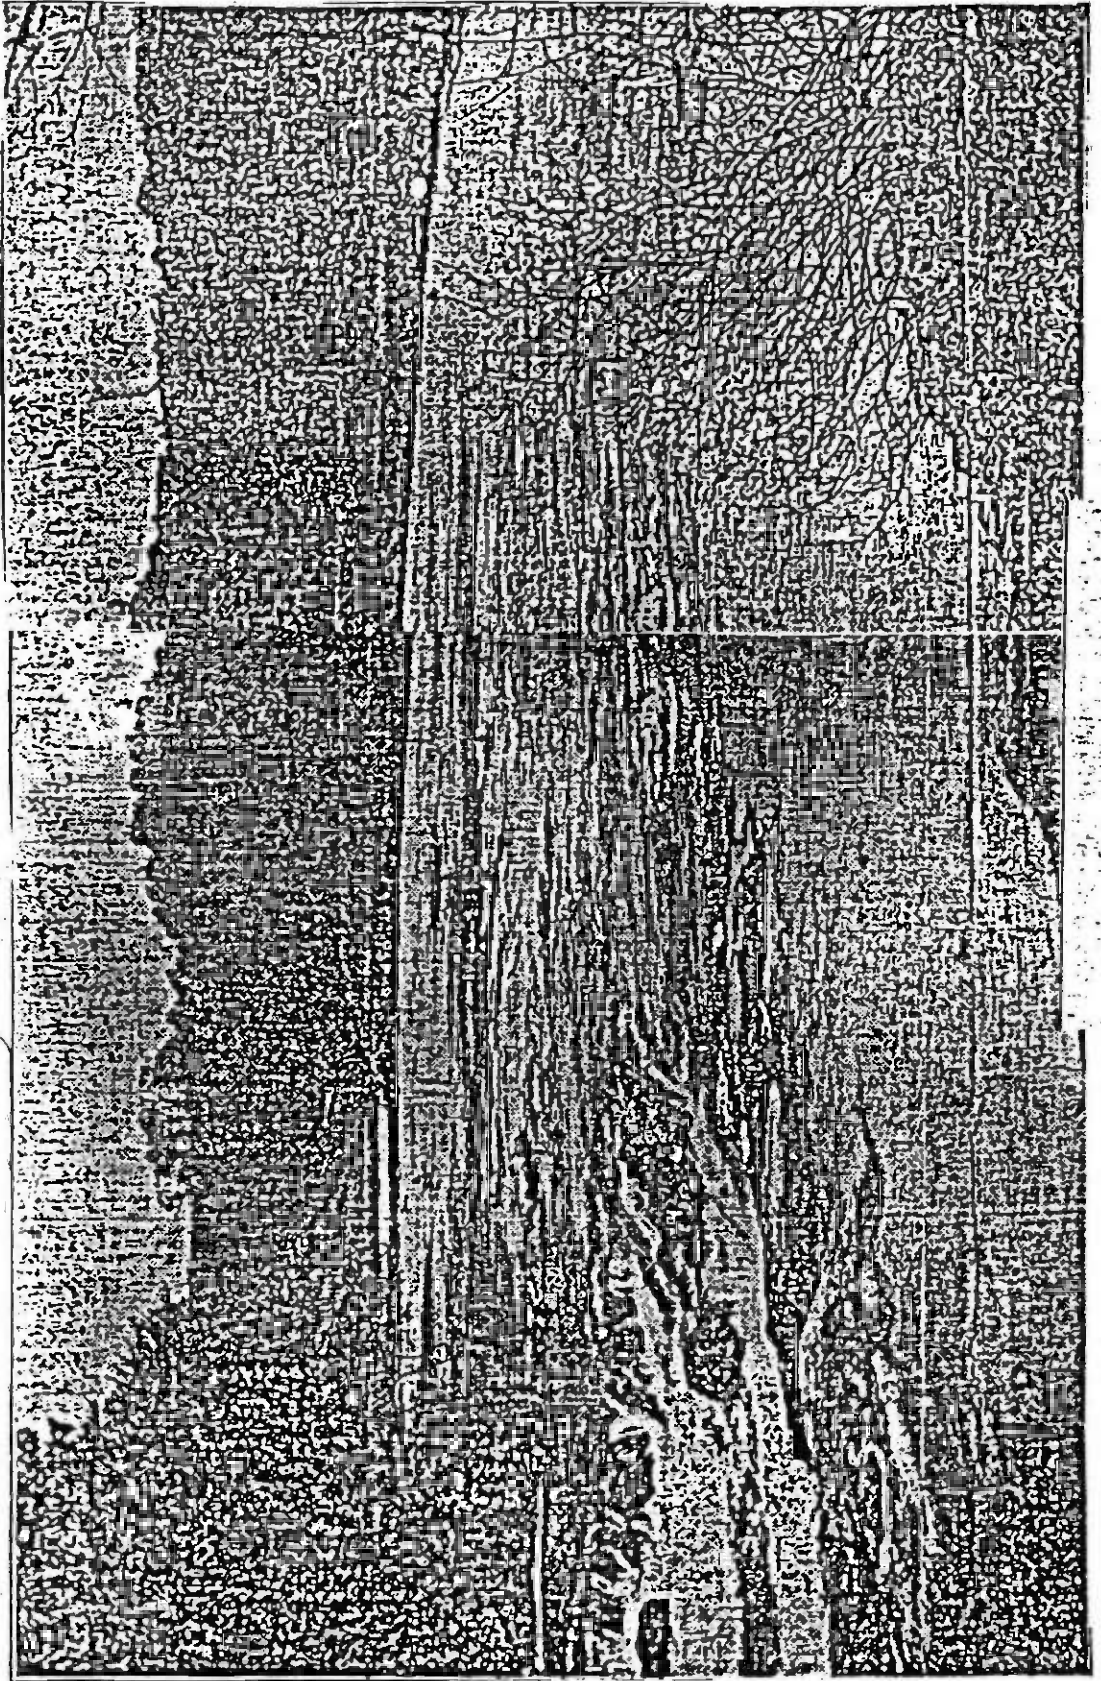

No welcome greeted our return,
No clang of martial tread,
But all were dumb and hushed as death
Before the mighty dead.

We laid our chief in Douglas Kirk,
The heart in fair Melrose;
And woful men were we that day—
God grant their souls repose!

OLD LANARK FAMILY

The Lockharts of Milton Lockhart

BIOGRAPHER OF SCOTT

THE Lockharts are one of the most ancient of Lanarkshire families. The name, as Andrew Lang suggests, probably derives from "de Loch Arde," but in any case there is no doubt about the antiquity of the family. The first Lockhart of whom we hear is Symon Lockard, who about 1153 founded the village and church of Symington, anciently called Villa Symons Lockard. Some of his descendants settled at the Lea, three miles below Lanark, where they soon eclipsed the parent branch of Symington, and have remained the chief house of the family.

One Symon Lockard of Lea was knighted by Robert Bruce, took his side in resisting the English, and after Bruce's death called with the good Lord James Douglas to carry the King's heart to the Holy Land. When Douglas fell fighting the Saracens in Spain, Symon took the command, rescued the heart of the Bruce and the body of Douglas, and returned to Scotland. His acquisition in Spain of the famous "Lea Penny" (the talisman), part of the ransom of a Moor, is well known. A heart within a letterlock was now added to the family bearings, and the name was changed from Lockard to Lockhart.

Descendants of Symon Lockhart settled at Carnwath, where two members of the family cut the ears of William Lithgow, the traveller, by his own scheme, for paying too much attention to their sister. One of the Carnwath Lockharts is said to have written "The wee, wee German Lairdie," though it is also given as Allan Cunningham's:

Who the deil hae we got for a King,
But a wee, wee German lairdie!
An' when we gaed to bring him hame,
He was delving in his kail-yardie,
Shedding kail an' laying loola,
But the boss and but the breaker,
Up his beggar duds to checka,
The wee, wee German lairdie.

Come up among the Highland hills,
- Thou wee, wee German lairdie;
An' see how Charlie's lang-kail thriva,
He dibbles in his yardie,
An' if a stock ye deir to pu',
Or hand the yoking of a plough,
We'll break yae sceptre o'er yae moss,
Thou wee, wee German lairdie.

William Lockhart and Milton

Other descendants of Symon settled at Cleghorn, where they still reside, and it is with this branch that we are concerned. A long history, enlivened with a feud with the Hamiltons and some Covenanting encounters, brings us down to the Rev. John Lockhart, an eminent divine, who held Blackfriars Church, Glasgow, for almost fifty years. He was the father, by different wives, of William and John Gibson Lockhart. The latter was born on June 14, 1791, at Cambusethan Manse. He lived to become the friend, marry the daughter, and write the biography of Sir Walter Scott. The renown of his writing was for him many enemies, among whom he was popularly called "The Scorpion"; but with Scott and later with Carlyle, he lived for years in intimate friendship.

William Lockhart was for some time the member of Parliament for Lanarkshire. In 1828 he purchased the estate of Milton, which lies among pleasant orchard lands of the Clyde. In "Old Mortality" Scott cast a certain romantic gleam over the neighbourhood, for not far away is the village of Rosneath, where the shooting of the popinjay took place, and some distance up the opposite bank of the river is the Castle of Tillietoulen. In order to distinguish it from some other properties of the same name in the county the estate was called Milton Lockhart.

Upon it was built the mansion of Milton Lockhart, a pleasant, well-balanced building in Scots baronial style, situated upon a spit of land round which the Clyde winds its way. The site of this mansion was chosen by Sir Walter Scott himself, and the designs were by Burn of Edinburgh. It was completed just a hundred years ago. The bridge over the Clyde which forms the principal approach to the mansion also merits attention. It has three arches, and was built in the ribbed style of the Old Bothwell Bridge, with arched gateway and watch towers at the north end.

Scott's Visit to the Estate

In 1831, when at work on "Castle Dangerous," Scott decided to pay a last visit to Clydeide for "local colour." On the 18th July he left Abbotsford in the company of his son-in-law. At Biggar, where they stopped for some time to change horses, Sir Walter was recognised, and "the population of the little town turned out." That evening they reached Douglas Mill, where they passed the night. The next day was spent in examining Castle Douglas and the neighbourhood, and on the following day they drove over by way of Lesmahagow to join Lockhart's brother at Milton Lockhart.

Scott met many old friends there, among them Elliot Lockhart of Cleghorn. He intended to stay some time, and had promised to call in at Cleghorn on his way home. Next morning, however, a messenger called to say that his old friend had fallen down in a fit and was despaired of. The effect of this news on Scott was curious. He cut short his visit and insisted on going home immediately. He looked upon his friend's fate as a bad warning to himself. "I must home to work while it is called day; for the night cometh when no man can work." He reached Abbotsford the same night, and worked so assiduously that he had finished both "Castle Dangerous" and "Count Robert of Paris" within a few weeks.

J. G. Lockhart

In the years that followed J. G. Lockhart was frequent visitor at his brother's hospitable house. After the death of his wife in 1837 he retired, at most in distraction, to Milton Lockhart, and tried to turn his mind to the "Life of Scott" upon which he was working. In August 1854, with the shadow of death already upon him, he was again at Milton Lockhart, and would probably have ended his life there had he not been so anxious to visit his daughter at Abbotsford. He died on November 25, 1854, in the room next to that in which Sir Walter Scott died, and was buried in Dryburgh Abbey, at the feet of his beloved master.

Upon the death of William Lockhart, Milton Lockhart became the property of his brother, the Rev. Lawrence Lockhart, who in turn was succeeded by his son, Major-General David Blair Lockhart.

Author and Soldier

Another son of the Rev. Lawrence Lockhart, Lawrence William Maxwell, upheld both the literary and military traditions of the family. He was born in 1831, and after being educated at Glasgow University and Cass College, Cambridge, he received a commission as ensign in the 62nd Regiment (Gordon Highlanders) in 1855. He was with his regiment at the siege of Sebastopol and in India. In 1865 he retired and devoted himself to literary work.

His three novels "Douglas and Quiza" (1859), "Fair to Sea" (1871), and "Mine is Thine" (1878), were popular enough in their own day, and went through numerous editions, though they are practically unknown to modern readers.

During the Franco-German War he travelled with the German Army as war correspondent of the Times. The work interested him greatly, but the hardships and exposures which it entailed undermined his health. He died on March 23, 1902, at Mentone, where he is buried.

APPENDIX XII

LOCKHART. From OFr. personal name Lo-card < Teut. Lochar. Stephen and Simon were settled in Lanarkshire and in Ayrshire in the twelfth century. They both acquired large territories and held important offices, and the former gave name to Stevenston in Cunningham. Symon Locard witnessed c. 1153-65 the grant of the church of Wicestun (now Wiston) and its two chapels to the Abbey of Kelso (Kelso, 336). He also attested charters by William the Lion, c. 1165-87 (RMP., p. 76; REG., p. 65), and a charter by Alan filius Walteri, dapifer regis, c. 1190 (Kelso, 260). Symon Loccard (Lochard or Locchard) filius Malcolmi Locard confirmed the church of Symondeston with all its pertinents to Kelso, c. 1180, and about same date confirmed the grant of the church of Wudeschirche (now Thankerston) to the same abbey (ibid., 333, 338). He also claimed the patronage of the 'capella ville ipsius Symone' (ibid., 335). Malcolm Loccard witnessed resignation of land in Weremundebi and Anant, c. 1194-1214 (Bain, 1, 606; Annandale, 1, p. 3). About 1210 Malcolm Loccard granted six acres of land 'in villa Simonis de Kyil' to the Abbey of Paisley (RMP., p. 70), and in 1228 witnessed a grant by Hugh de Bygris (Kelso, 186). Jordan Locard witnessed an obligation by Duncanus de Carric, 1225 (REG., p. 117). A later Symon Locarde witnessed grant of the church of Wicestun to Kelso between 1247-64, and in 1273 he revived the old claim to the patronage of the church of Symondston and kept back the greater part of the tithes (Kelso, 336, 334). William Locard witnessed confirmation of the church of Cragyn to Paisley, c. 1272 (RMP., p. 233), and Maucolum Lockare of Ayrshire rendered homage, 1296 (Bain, n, p. 206). Sir George Lockhart, President of the Court of Session, was murdered by Chiesley of Dalry, 1689. The Rosses of Balnagown, Ross-shire, are really Lockharts by name. The myth about an ancestor of the Lockharts securing the heart of Bruce which Douglas perilled in the fight with the Saracens in Spain led to the spelling of the name Lockhart, and the alteration of the coat of arms either to perpetuate the belief, or as Nisbet says 'to make their arms more univocal to the name.' Locarde 1291, Locart 1424, Loccard 1296, Loccart 1684, Lokart 1452, Lokarte 1467, Lokcart 1408, Lockhartt 1637, Lockheart 1672, Lokert 1547, Lokhart 1488, Lokharte 1593, Lokhartt 1614, Lokheart 1432, Lokhert 1621, Lokkard 1585, Lokkart 1507, Lokkert 1503, Lokwert 1591. Andrew Lang (History, 1, p. 236) erroneously says the name is territorial, 'de Loch Ard'

(Bain, iv, 1187, 1207). In 1577 the old family of the name is referred to as Sydsarf of that ilk (RPC., ii, p. 736). William Sydsarf of Rouchlaw was admitted burgess of Stirling in 1617 (SBR., p. 148). Thomas Sydsarf (d. 1663) was successively bishop of Brechin, Galloway, and Orkney. Another Thomas Sydsarf was editor of the Mercurius Caledonius, the earliest Scottish newspaper, published in 1661. Sydsarf 1658, Sinsarf 1656, Sydsarf 1614, Sydsarf 1373, Sydsarf 1590, Synsarff 1648, Sydsarfe (of that ilk) 1508; also Said-sarf and Sadsarf.

SYM, SYME. Variants of SIM, SIME, q.v., the more common forms of the name.

SYMAN. Recorded in CD. Probably a variant of SYMON, q.v.

SYMERS. See under SYMMERS.

SYMINGTON. There is a village and parish of Symington in the Kyle district of Ayrshire, but the old family of Symington derive from Symington in the Upper Ward of Lanarkshire. Symon Loccard, ancestor of the Lockharts of Lee, held both places in the latter half of the twelfth century under the Stewards. Between 1315-21 Robert I confirmed to Thomas filius Ricardi all the barony of Symundestone in the sheriffdom of Lanark (RMS., i, 78). This Thomas son of Richard (Thomas Dickson) was progenitor of the family of Symington of that ilk. The family held the barony till towards the middle of the seventeenth century. John of Symontoun of that ilk appears as sheriff-depute of Lanark in 1478 and 1490 (ALA., p. 44, 72, 148). John of Symontoun was juror in Lanark, 1501 (Lanark, p. 11). John Symontoun de eodem was served heir to his father in the barony of Symontoun (except 26 oxgates in the town) with the office of bailie of the barony of Dowglas and the captaincy of the castle thereof, and other lands, in 1612 (Retours, Lanark, 478). The first real steamship built in the United Kingdom was constructed by William Symington, and launched on the river Carron in 1789. Symmontoun 1578, Symmontone 1682, Symmontoune and Symingtoune 1684, Symontoun 1537, Symontoune 1581, Symontown 1687, Symountoun 1632. See also under DICKSON.

SYMMERS; SYMERS, SIMMERS, SOMERS, SUMMER, SUMMERS. Metcalf-Jamieson (Scottish dictionary) has: Somer, a sumpter, applied to both men and horses, OF. somier, sammier. William Sumer witnessed a grant by Richard de Paynstoun to the Hospital of Soltre between 1180-1214 (Soltre, p. 5). In 1326

David II granted to William Somyr for life an annual rent of 40s. (Stodart, ii, p. 375). Johannes Sommer was burgess of Perth in 1365 (RMS., i, 196), and in 1376 the lands of Scralyne were leased to William Sumer (RHM., i, p. lxxvii). George Somyr was one of a number chosen "to inquire and know vppone the landis and guidis pertaining to Walter Ogilvy of Owres" in 1478 (ALA., June, 1478), and a later George Symmer was charged with oppression, 1529 (Trials, i, p. 141 *). Adam Summer had sasine in 1550 as heir c^t Barthillomew Summyr in Glasgow (Protocols, i), and Andrew Symmer, quarrior, admitted burgess freeman of Glasgow gratis in 1584, "because he is ane calsay maker and hes promised to mak twa rude of calsay, gratis" (Burgesses). David Sommer appears in Ancrem in 1633 (Retours, Roxburgh, 152), John Symer was trade burgess of Aberdeen, 1641 (ROA., i, p. 232), John Simmer was bar of Brathinsch in 1646 (Jervise, Land of Lindsays, p. 433), and Elizabeth Simmer is recorded in Stank, parish of Stonehouse, 1687 (Lanark CR.). Symmer or Somyr of Balzeordie, an old Angus family of whom nothing much is known. They possessed Balzordie in 1450. In 1682 Symmer of Baljordie were described as "ane ancient familie and chief of the name" (Account of shire of Forfar, Spottiswoode Miscellany, i, p. 335). They continued to be considered "chief of the name" till about the middle of the eighteenth century when the male branch failed (Jervise, Land of Lindsays, p. 310-311). They took a prominent part in local affairs. At least one member of the family changed the spelling in last century to Seymour. Simer and Simers 1686, Summyr 1550, Sumyr 1454, Symer 1633, Symir 1551, Symeir 1530, Symour 1688. In the Edinburgh Marriage Records, 1595-1800, the name occurs as: Symmer, Simmer, Symers, Summer, Summers, Somer, Somers, and Sommer; and in Greyfriars Burial Register, 1658-1700: Somers, Simers, Simeres, Sommers, and Summers.

SYMON. A form of SIMON, which in the N. T. represents O. T. Simeon (and Symeon). The Hebrew is Shim'on, a name of doubtful meaning. Explained by some as meaning "offspring of hyena and wolf" (Encyclopaedia Biblica, iv, p. 4531), by others as from the verb shame "hear." The N. T. form appears to be due to confusion with a Greek nickname, Simon "flat-nosed." (2) It may also represent the common OE. personal name Sigemund which later became Simon and Sumond. Symon, capellanus, witnessed a charter by William Bruce to Adam Carlyle, c. 1194-1214 (Anandale, i, p. 2), and Symon or Simon, archidiaconus of Aberdeen, was a charter witness,

COPY OF WILL OF JAMES LOCKHART
(Dr. Lockhart's Great Grandfather)

Dated October 2nd, 1798:

I, James Lockhart, of Johnston County and State of North Carolina, being of sound mind, and thanks be to God for the same, do make and again declare this my last will and testament, revoking any and all others heretofore made.

ITEM: I lend to my beloved wife, Hannah Hawkins Lockhart, during her widowhood, and no longer time, one negro wench, called Nan; two feather beds and furniture, one table, six knives and forks, four chairs, two basins, two dishes, one chest, one horse bridle and saddle, one woolen wheel and card, one flaxwheel and hackle, two cows and calves; two ewes and lambs; two sows and pigs; one iron pot and hanger, one dutch oven, one pair of smoothing irons, one tub, pail and pigging, one loom and some geese and few other articles such as she cannot conveniently keep house without, such as provisions for first year, and the seine and the privileges necessary to support the seine beach and the land and plantation whereon I now dwell, on the east side of Wolf Pitt branch, during the above mentioned time, and after that to them that may have right to enjoy it by law.

ITEM: I give and bequeath to my son, Benjamin Lockhart, one tract or parcel of land, as follows:

Beginning on the South side of Neuse River, where Archibold Vinson's upper line comes to the river, thence his line and mine to the north prong of Norris Creek; thence up the various courses of the said prongs to the Spring, a large poplar; thence a small distance by the Spring, a west course to a line of mine that extends north and South; thence with and with that line north to Knotty Branch; thence down the various courses of the said branch as far until a north course will strike the head of a small branch that entered into the river, opposite, the mouth of Sapworth Creek, the line to leave Knotty Branch where it may strike the head of the western prong of the branch at the upper spring, then down the various courses thereof to the beginning, except what I have left to my wife Hannah, containing 200 acres, more or less, to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: The rest of my land except 200 acres on Poplar I desire to be equally divided between my three sons, namely, Cary Lockhart, Thomas Lockhart, and Elam Lockhart, to have the plantation where I now dwell, and his part adjoining to it, to them, their heirs and assigns forever. The 200 acres to be sold by my executor for the use of building a good decent dwelling house for my wife to live in during the above time, and if that should not be sufficient to complete it, the moneys arising out of any other property must do it, if I do not do it in my life time,

SIXTY YEARS ON THE BRAZOS

ITEM: I give to my son John Lockhart, one negro woman named Clary, and $150.00 to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give to my son James Lockhart, one negro man, named Harry, to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give unto my son, Brittin Lockhart, the sum of FIVE DOLLARS to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give to my son Stephen Lockhart, one negro man, named Julian, and $50.00 to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give and bequeath to my son, Osborne Lockhart, one mulatto woman named Pat, to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give to Thomas Lockhart, one negro man, named Ned, to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give to my son Benjamin Lockhart, one negro girl, named Sal, to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give to my daughter, Patsy Lockhart, one negro girl, named Ritza, to her heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give to my daughter, Eda, one negro girl, name Rose, to her heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give to my son, Cary Lockhart, one negro boy named, Phil, to him, his heirs and assigns forever.

ITEM: I give unto my son, Elam Lockhart, one negro girl, named Esther, to him, his assigns forever.

N. B. If any of my children should lose any of their negroes before they receive them by death, then my wife to distribute part of what she has lent to her to give them some relief, and the rest of my estate not willed away, I desire to be sold to the highest bidder by executors, hereinafter mentioned, and John Lockhart to be paid 30 Pounds out of it, and my son, Thomas, and all of my children that are younger than him, to be equally divided between them, and I appoint my loving wife, Hannah Hawtins Lockhart, Robert Gulley Sr., and Osborne Lockhart, and Thomas Lockhart, executors of my last will and testament.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal, the 2nd day of October, 1798.

The Founding of the Family

The history of Scotland abounds with the names of illustrious families who have taken part in the development of the country over the centuries. Campbell and Gordon; Graham and Stewart; Douglas and Scott; Highland Chief and Lowland Baron, the list is a long one and includes the names of many who still make their contribution to the well-being of the country. Some fought to free the country from English domination in the Wars of Scottish Independence, some sought power for themselves in the struggle between noble and King; some sided with the Old Church and some with the New Kirk in the religious wars which ended in the ousting of the Stuarts. Many won titles and vast estates for themselves and their descendants by their support of the King; others lost not only their lands but their heads as well by backing the wrong side. The Lockharts cannot be said to have produced a line of great statesmen or politicians. They won fame as lawyers mostly, though there was one famous diplomat and one member of Parliament who might have made a distinguished name for himself had he not been on the losing side. The family found and held a place for itself in the establishment of the country as it emerged. Whatever action there was the Lockharts were usually involved in it for weal or woe.

The name of Lockhart is derived from Locard, sometimes spelt Lokart. The modern spelling seems to have been introduced in the fifteenth century, and refers to the crusade on which Sir Symon Locard was the custodian of the key of the casket in which Bruce's heart was carried. Like so many Scottish families the Locards came from the South. They were among those who were dispossessed by William the Conqueror, and sought refuge in Scotland.¹ There were Locards at Levinton near Penrith in the twelfth century, and we next hear of them in Annandale in Dumfriesshire, where the town of Lockerbie² is said to be named after them. But the family finally settled in Ayrshire and Lanarkshire, where they have held land for over seven hundred years.

There are few records of those early days and those that do survive are fragmentary and disconnected. We are indeed fortunate to be able to trace such a long and more or less continuous story; most of the records that enable us to do so are the documents concerned with the grants of lands to the Lockharts, or in some cases to other families where the Lockharts were witnesses to the transaction. The ownership of land has always carried with it responsibilities as well as privileges and never more so than in feudal times. The vassal to whom a grant of land was made by the King was responsible among other things for the administration and the keeping of the peace in his district. He also had to provide the sinews of war when called upon to do so by his Sovereign. All these duties were more or less well documented at the time and where the archives survive we may glean some information about the family and the part it played in national and local affairs from them. As we progress through the centuries we shall find more complete records and we can learn more about the character of individual members of the family and of their contribution to the country's progress.

The earliest paper in the family archives is a charter dated 1323. By this Sir Symon Locard bound himself and his heirs to pay out of the lands of Lee and Cartland "....to Sir William de Lyndesey, Rector.... of Air [Ayr] ten pounds sterling of annual rent.... in consideration of a certain sum of money paid to me with which I hold myself well satisfied...." We are not told how much the principal sum in this loan was, but it may have been in the region of a hundred pounds to judge by the interest payable on it. The number and rank of the witnesses to this bond, which was confirmed by King Robert the Bruce, indicate the importance with which it was regarded and this reflects the value of money at that time.

We do know something of the earlier members of the family and we can trace them back to Stephanus, or Stephen Locard, grandfather of the Symon mentioned above. According to the Loudon Charter granting the lands of Loudon to James Lambin by Richard de Morville.³ Stephanus also founded the village of Stevenston in Ayrshire. This would have been a hamlet or "ferm-toun" housing the farmers and workers on part of his estate. He was also the progenitor of the Ayrshire branch of the family of Stephenson.

His son Symon acquired lands in Lanarkshire and like his father commemorated his name by founding a village and calling it Symon's Toun, or as it is called today Symington.⁴ He built a Church there between 1153 and 1165. The Church was a rich one drawing revenue in the form of teinds or tythes from a considerable area. In 1189 the Abbey of Kelso claimed the patronage and revenues of the Church on the grounds that previous to its establishment their Church at Wyston [Wiston] had been generally recognised. The case was referred to the Bishop of Glasgow and the Abbot of Paisley. A compromise was reached when Locard agreed to surrender the Church with all its revenues provided that the incumbent whom he had appointed should be allowed to continue in office, holding it from the Abbey of Kelso during his life time.⁵

This however was not the end of the dispute over the teinds; in 1273 another Sir Symon Loccard, son of Malcolm, seized the teinds of the parish and refused to account for them to the Abbey. The matter was settled at Castillaris [Carstairs], a property belonging to the Bishopric of Glasgow. There were present the Bishop, the King's Chamberlain and the Sheriff of Lanark as well as other notable persons. The matter was quickly resolved when Sir Symon admitted that he had no right to the "fruits of advarson of the Church" and bound himself and his heirs never to trouble the monks or their vicar under pain of being ".....publicly cursed by the Lord Bishop or his official Sunday and holiday with bells rung and candles lighted through all the diocese of Glasgow, and also under the penalty of paying twenty pounds to the fabric of the Church of Glasgow and a similar sum to that of Kelso".⁶

In those deeply religious days the curse was perhaps more feared than the fine.

Sir Symen had two sons the elder of whom, another Symon, inherited his father's estates, while the younger son, Malcolm, settled in Ayrshire,⁷ about 1210.⁸

There is some confusion over who actually acquired the lands of Lee; according to Douglas' Baronage the Symon Lockhart mentioned above was the first to be referred to as "of Lee". However Irving and Murray in "The Upper Ward of Lanarkshire" give this position to William second son of Malcolm, and this theory has been adopted here. The exact date when the lands of Lee came in the family is not known but 1272 is traditionally accepted. We do know that in 1288 the lands of Lee were held from the Crown and paid a rent of 66 shillings; in 1289 the rent was five chalders⁹ of oatmeal and eighty shillings. Symon also owned the lands of Craiglockard (now Craiglockhart) in Edinburgh. He was knighted by Alexander III.

Douglas' Baronage also states that Symon was followed by two sons, Malcolm and Stephen, both of whom were forced to submit to King Edward I and swear allegiance to him when he ruled Scotland about 1320. Next we have another Symon and here we are on firmer ground, though whether he was the son of Stephen or of William is not clear. Symon (Second of Lee) won fame for himself and his family. He was concerned in exciting historical events, which resulted in the family name being changed to Lockhart. Symon fought alongside Robert Bruce in the struggle to free Scotland from English domination, and he was knighted by Bruce for his loyal service.

This was the age of chivalry when knights won fame in this world, and redemption in the next, by fighting for Christendom against the infidels who held the Holy City of Jerusalem. In doing so Bruce hoped to make atonement for his sacrilege when he murdered the Red Comyn¹⁰ in a convent chapel near Dumfries, during his early struggle for the Scottish crown. Bruce never achieved this desire in his lifetime, but on his deathbed he commanded his knights and nobles to remove his heart when he died and take it on a crusade to the Holy Land.

In 1329 a band of Scottish knights set out to fulfil the last wish of their dead King. Their leader, Lord James Douglas, carried the King's heart in "ane cas of silver fyn, enamilit throu subtilite" hung about his neck.¹¹ Beside him rode Sir Symon Locard, carrying the key of the casket.

Sir Symon had won fame and distinction in the wars against the English; and now he was entrusted with the key of the precious casket, he must not only have been renowned for his courage and loyalty, but was surely also one of the dead King's closest friends. The Scottish knights sailed first to Sluys to allow Flemish knights the opportunity of joining them, thence they sailed to Spain and landed at Valencia. Hearing that King Alphonso of Castile was engaged in an attempt to drive the Saracens from his country, they offered him their services. Here was a double incentive for those who had fought so long to free their own country from the usurper, and whose King's last command had been to go and do battle with the infidel. They joined Alphonso's army and took part in a battle at Teba.¹²

As a result of a misunderstood order at the start of the battle the Scots charged prematurely and became surrounded. When Douglas saw Sir William St. Clare of Roslin in dire straits tradition says he seized the casket from his neck and flung it into the fray shouting as he did so: "Be thou in the van brave heart as thou wast ever wont, and Douglas will follow or die." The battle was won and the casket with the precious heart safely recovered, but Douglas their gallant leader lay dead on the field. This so disheartened the band that they abandoned the expedition and returned home with Bruce's heart, which is said to have been buried in Melrose Abbey. It was to commemorate Sir Symon's part in this adventure and the honour done to the family that at some later date the name was changed to Lockheart and afterwards abbreviated to Lockhart. A heart within a fetterlock was from then on included in the arms of the family with the motto "Corda Serata Pando".¹³

The family took more than a new name home from this crusade; it gained a precious heirloom which has been treasured ever since, the mysterious charm known as the Lee Penny. Sir Walter Scott¹⁴ used the story of its acquisition by the family as the basis for his novel, "The Talisman", but he admits that he made no effort to adhere to the historical details.
